

Hoping for health. Seniors from the Health Science Technology II class pause for a moment of reflection on a clinical day. "One of the most meaningful events of the year was when we sold raffle tickets and had a fair to raise money for the American Cancersociety," senior Harry Brown said. Harry was the president of the organization.

Concentrating sew much. Freshman Mary Francis Rodgers and Kelsey Ammons sew for Mrs. Singleton's Home Economics Class. They raised money to get materials needed for their class.

Do you get it yet? Mrs. Farris explains to her students new ideas for her fundraisers. DECA was a marketing and manufacturing class which holds several fundraisers in order to raise money for their class.

Striking a pose. Senior Amber Straub blasts her horn during practice or the half-time routine. The band of sold fruit and candy to pay for their trips throughout the year.

