

I THINK I CAN

Students like Reginald McNeil strive to achieve their dreams

There have always been certain goals and aspirations that everyone has reached for throughout their entire life. As the newly acquainted students attempted to make it through the school year, many of them also set goals in which they wished to achieve. Although a nearly all of the student body set goals, many of them lost sight of their expectations through the course of the year.

Although many students were interviewed about how they felt towards setting goals, one student in particular stood out from the crowd. This specific student stood out because of his approach to the situation. Instead of witty comments and sarcastic remarks, freshman Reginald McNeil portrayed a sense of reality and seriousness. "People set goals to have something to look forward to, or something to follow in life. [For instance,] I want to go to college not only to play football, but I also wish to further my education. In college, I hope to achieve my long-term goals," Reginald said.

Reginald started his expedition towards his long-term goals by attending football practice everyday. Serving as a team player soon became another one of his set goals. He put forth strenuous efforts everyday in order to prove that he was no longer acting as an individual by himself, but as an individual acting as a team player. He proved himself not only to his teammates, but also to his coach. "I enjoy working with other people as well as working alone," Reginald said.

Representing his freedom. Senior Shannon Deloach stands next to an American flag while in his ROTC uniform. He is showing everyone that he can do all things possible in our free country.

Posing for the camera. Freshman Reginald McNeil stops in the middle of the hall to take a picture. He studies hard during school so he can pass and remain on the football team.
