

Proving Their Power

Hoop Dreams

Pulling together a varsity basketball team with talent came easily this year. Many of the players became good friends and worked well together. "The team is great, we trust one another and help each other out like a family," senior Antonio Drain said.

Proceeding their first win against Woodland, the guys were confident about the games to come. A few of the team members were anxious about playing their competitors. "I am ready to play Summerville because they are our competitors, and well, I just hate em'," sophomore Deonte' Dicks said.

Basketball games were among one of the most popular past times here at Colleton County. The town definitely supported high school sports; some of the most dedicated adults were the coaches. They apparently made impacts on some of the players at the beginning of the season. "I show complete respect to the coaches because they had to take upon a new team and regroup," junior Larry Richardson said.

Six members of the team were asked what their favorite thing about the sport was, and five out of six answered that they loved competing and winning. "I loved being able to show my skills," senior Da'Quan Hayes said. This year, the basketball team members, with out any doubt, portrayed and made it known that they were a team of skill and finesse.

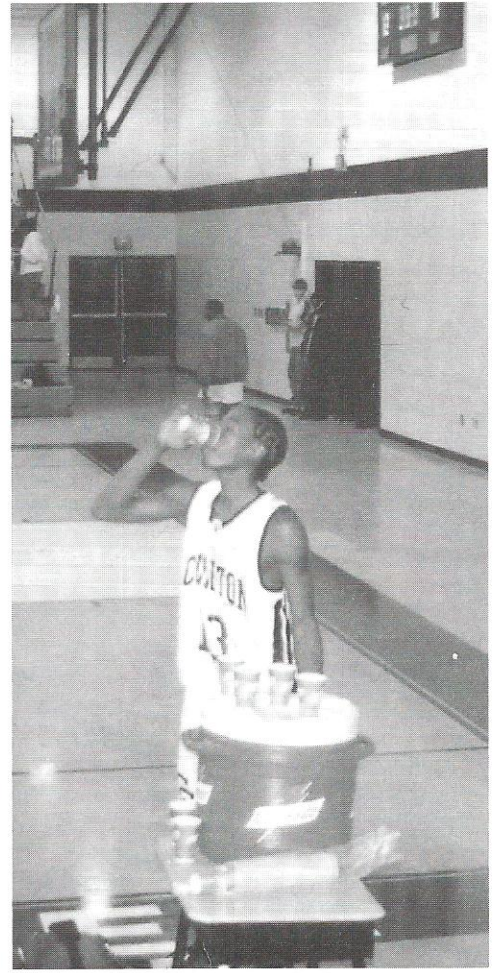

- Maegan Causey

Out on a limb. Looking for one of his team mates, Deonte' Dicks tries to make a pass. After holding the ball, he made a shot. The crowd rose in silence as the ball brushed the net.

Caught in the act. Eric Jordan shows awesome offensive ability. While playing keep away with his opponent, he made a sweet pass to one of his team mates.

Takin' a break. #13 only has a short amount of time to rest and think about his future plays. He often started the games and set the team up for victory.