Writing their hearts out, the journalism class worked hard this year. They achieved goals like, completing newspapers and a 180 page yearbook. Journalism is basically about being committed. "Journalism means making a huge commitment to myself, my school, and information in an organized and flawless way," junior Beth Brooks said.

They interviewed many students throughout the year. "yearbook is totally fun, we get to meet a lot of people and see everyone's yearbook pictures before they do," sophomore Faith Crosby said.

Journalism students said that they improved their writing skills. While in the class, "You have to write your copy 500 million times," senior Sarah Rivers said.

Students needed writing skills to be a success in the class. Journalism students wrote captions and stories non-stop. "I love writing, it's almost like a hobby for me," junior Elizabeth Norton said.

Editors should be praised for their hard work. They demanded students to do things that they did not necessarily want to do. "Sometimes Taylor can be very demanding, but then he can also be a sweetie and allow you to turn the article in late," sophomore Morgan Drawdy said.

"Journalism is a way of expressing my views and opinions on what's going on in the world around me," Whitney Smoak said. Whitney became well known for her great writing skills and her ability to produce good articles.

Sophomore Lucas Zaker diligently works hard on his story to try and make the front page. "Being in newspaper takes a lot of work and dedication because we try to produce a good paper for the school," Lucas said.

Sophomore Faith Crosby works diligently on her yearbook spread. She cropped pictures for her pages. "I like yearbook, because everyone in the class is really close and we can depend on one another," Faith said.

Junior Mack Altman tries his best to get the pictures organized. "Sometimes being in yearbook can be very stressful because it's a lot of hard work that has to be done in so little of time," Mack said.
