

Seniors Kevin Kinard and Josh Nadzack lighten the mood of the blood drive for senior Meagan Smith as she helps with paperwork. The NHS encouraged teachers and students to help out with the blood drive.

Seniors Kaylan Salisbury, Jessica Goodwin, and Margaret Smith smile for the camera while they enjoy a snack and a drink after donating their dedication and such hard work.

High achievers at CCHS

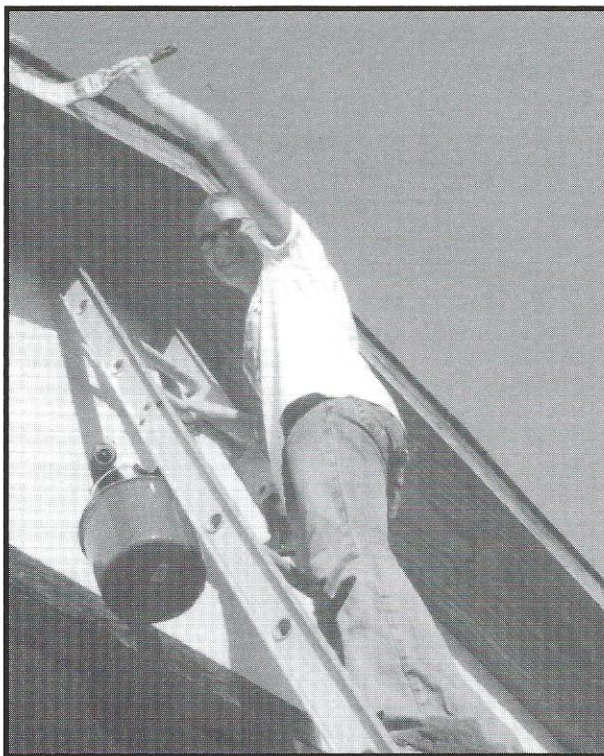

REACHING FOR THE STARS

The National Honor Society is a group of young students that help the community to be a better place to live. With a GPA of 3.7 or higher, these students earned their right to be in NHS.

Members worked at least 40 hours or more doing community service each year. "We like helping out in our community for unprivileged people," junior Victoria Hoff said. These juniors and seniors represented character, community, service, and leadership.

"My main job is to keep track of events and record information. The ultimatum is to put together a scrap book at the end of the year," senior Elle Ellison said. Members met every third monday to discuss upcoming events. These elite students showed school pride with good grades and a clean record.

-Eric Thomas

Senior Amy Hartenburg works diligently painting for NHS. Members of NHS worked at least 40 hours a year to help the community.

