

Expressing Pride

When the doors opened, students quickly filtered in embarking on their future, which so suddenly became the present. Students expressed their pride in a variety of ways during the days of announcements, fire/tornado drills, and chaotic daily schedules. These ways of expression ranged from clothing and hair styles to body art. Each individual person added to the varied differences in people. Pride existed at the heart of every student. What people stood for shaped their decisions, and more importantly, their lives. For within the Cougar halls, diversification allowed expressions of pride.
