

Oh What A Night

Walterboro, known for its small city limits, proved to be an overall hot spot for teens and their friends. Students went to certain places they knew they would find their friends like Jefferies Boulevard, Ivanhoe Cinemas, and Wal-mart. "There's about three or four places in town I go," senior Stephen Blackmon said.

At some places they went, there were lots of people and other times there were only a few. Even with only a few friends some of the best memories happened to be made. Some students just sat around and watched movies; others hit the road and cruised around for a night out on the town. Going different places gave students a chance to build new friendships and bond with new people. Whether they cruised around town or hung out with friends, students found a way to enjoy themselves. "I never went anywhere by myself because my friends always go; it was more fun with friends," freshman Josh Saines said.

HANGIN' OUT, HAVIN' FUN

"I hang out with my friends in the Wal-mart parking lot because most of them work up there. We'll stand around and talk or find something else to do."

Shooting some pool with friends, sophomore April Allen hangs out at the bowling alley on a Friday night. "I hung out with friends at the bowling alley because it gave me something to do and my friends were awesome," April said.

Dairy Land is the place to be after a home football game. It has been around since our parents were in school, and they enjoyed it then too. Crowds of people went to enjoy the food and meet up with their friends.

Hanging out in the Wal-mart parking lot, sophomore Miles Wiggins and senior Katie Carter stand and talk. "I always saw my friends at Wal-mart. I went there just to see friends or to get something I need," Katie said.
