

Masters Of KNOWLEDGE

All About Running the Race

Darkness filled Mr. Smith's room as students actively voiced answers about History, English, Science and Math. Nineteen students participated on the Academic Team. One freshmen, four sophmores, seven juniors, and seven seniors. These students challenged themselves in a game that tested their skills. The knowledge master, a test given by their coordinator, Mr. Smith, served to provide rankings amongst the team. "The knowledge master was not about how much I know, but how well I used my common sense," sophmore Rachel Hanson said.

With all nineteen members, only twelve actually participated in the competitions. "Although we had tough competition, we ranked high considering the odds," Mr. Smith said.

Every year seven to eight competitions kept the team on their toes. The team averaged around one or two trophies per year. Many members found the team to be enjoyable and a good way to educate themselves. "Over all, you have to be knowledgeable about something in every area," senior Brice Griffin said.

The academic team did well this year, and only missed going to Nationals by a couple of places.

Checking answers and the attention span of the students, Mr. Smith watches them go to work. "Our team is pretty impressive this year," Mr. Smith said. The team had twelve active members and they took every question seriously.

Great minds think alike, and seniors Latina Washington and Khalliah White, along side sophmore Margaret Cogswell proved it to be so. "The team is challenging but it is exciting to be a part of it," senior Khalliah White said.
