

For the Love

of Music

Sweet Southern Singin'

A lot of hard work and dedication came from the members of chorus. The students worked hard to perfect every one of their performances. Mrs. Drawdy strived to see that her chorus was the best that it could be. Chorus required patience, understanding, and team work. Everyone worked together to achieve a common goal: a great performance. "I didn't get nervous before performances because I knew if I messed up the rest of the chorus would still carry on, so it wouldn't be so bad," senior Andrew Siegler said.

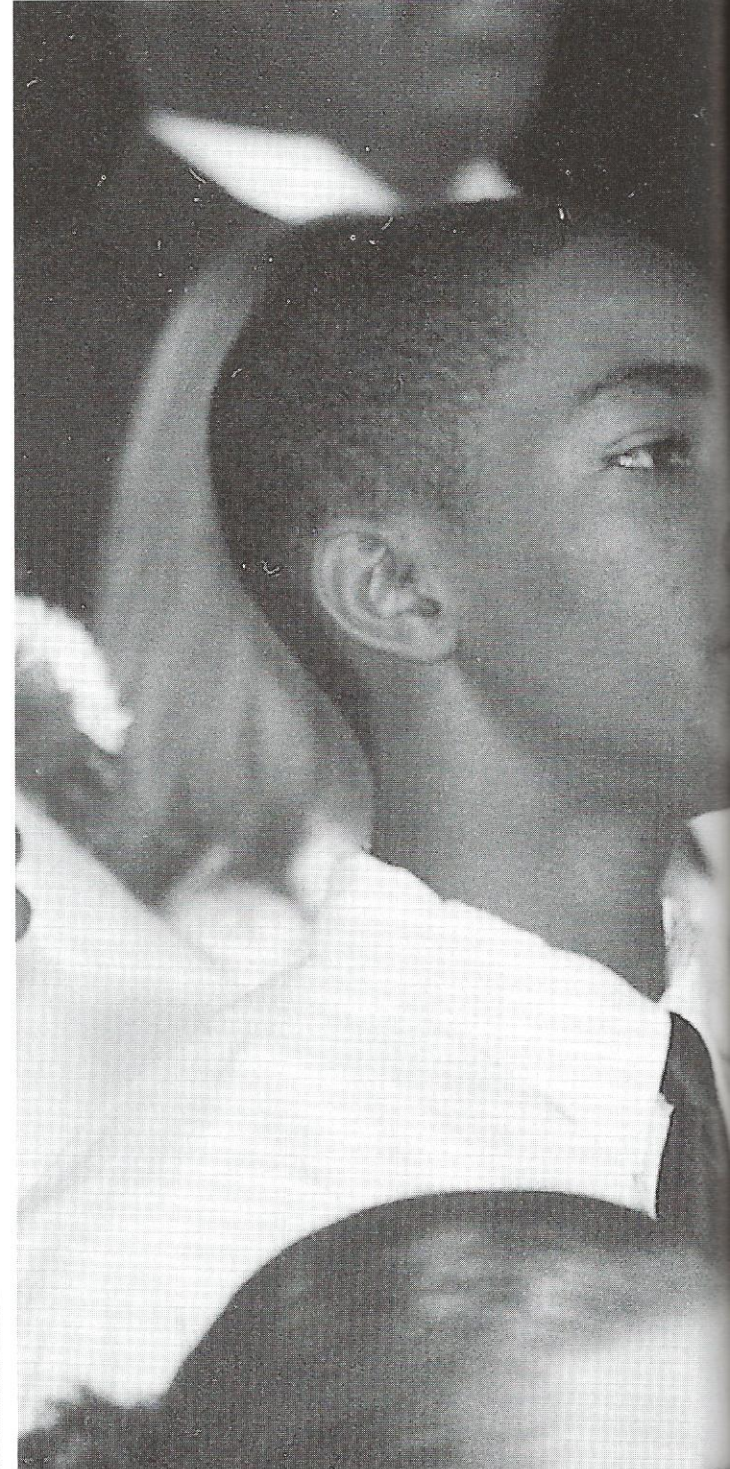

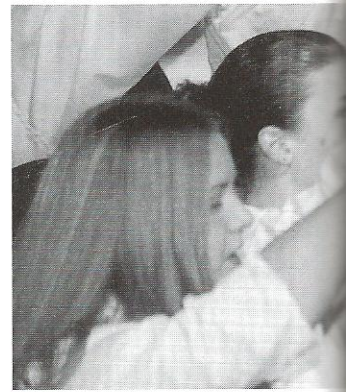

Their effort showed in all of their performances. Mrs. Drawdy also offered lessons after school. The members learned new vocabulary words, new music notes and warmed up before they started singing.

At the beginning of the school year they practiced for the homecoming football game by singing the Alma Mater and National Anthem. They then started practice for a competition called All State, held in Charleston. "I thought people in my class were talented because they took what they learned and perfected it," senior La'Quaysha Grant said. Each and every student gave their all and never gave up. They wanted to be the best and make their chorus the best it could possibly be.

-Amber Souza

Concentrating on his music notes, junior Ahmad Brown performs with the chorus at a Friday night football game. "I've been in chorus since I was in eighth grade and I love singing," said Ahmad.

Singing her heart out, sophomore Allison Hudson sings the National Anthem. "I really love chorus. It is the best way to get rid of a bad mood and Mrs. Drawdy is the best," Allison said.

"I really love chorus, singing is something I love to do, and I would really love for us to win all state."

Jasmine
Murphy, 12th
grade

