NHS / Student Council

The National Honor Society and the Student Council have been two of the most noted organizations at Colleton County High School for many years. They are in charge of things like homecoming district rallies and much more. They sponsor blood drives, can food drives and they have also done a lot of community service. The NHS and the student council have been much more than just organizations, they're a group of people who come together as a family to help make our school and our community a better place for us as well as little children to grow. "The Student Council and the National Honor Society are a great group of people with great leadership" sophomore Knox Martin said

"I decided to join the NHS because it gives us the chance to help out the community and, it also really good on college applications," junior Rebecca Hamilton said.

"I like being in the student council because it gives me the chance to voice my opinion," junior Kavita Patel said

"To me, being in the student council means setting a good example for the younger generation of students," Freshmen Dani Sexton said.

"I choose to get involved with the NHS because it recognizes students academically and it's fun getting to spend some extra time with my friends," senior Ankur Desai said.
