

IN the Spotlight

Time to hit the stage!

The lights dim, the audience silences, and the curtains open. Standing behind the curtain is the cast of the play. A strange awe falls as the first word of the play is said, the nervousness fades, the play picks up, setting a whole new bar for acting. Drama isn't just acting out scenes. It's taking on a persona and using your emotions to express it to the fullest. These students love acting and it shows when they perform. "I think performing is honestly my first love. I'd rather be acting than doing anything else." Chardea Barnes said. With Mrs. Gantt's help, these students can express themselves and look good doing it.
