

HARTS

If you were about music and art, then HARTS was the house for you. Music, art, drama, and more were included in the electives that shaped the HARTS house. The School of Humanities and Arts was rich in culture. From fine arts to music theory, HARTS was designed for people who had a love for the creative side of life. Sophomore Emily Hiott explained, "The career I hope to pursue is journalism. I'm editor of the Yearbook Staff, and I have treated the annual like my baby! I know that the key editing skills that Yearbook has taught me will benefit me later on in my job field." Being in HARTS made you explore your creativity, opened up your mind to the world, and gave everyone a view of the arts.

TOP LEFT "I wouldn't change anything about HARTS," said senior Amber Sanders. Her creative mind was running wild during one of her classes, dreaming about a future career as an artist.

RIGHT "I chose HARTS because of my love for music," explained freshman Victoria Dalton. Before an exciting period of singing, Victoria showed off her favorite class. She hopes to become a singer later down the road.

BOTTOM LEFT "I think the best part about HARTS is that I can do something that I enjoy doing," stated junior Leslie Davenport. Leslie plans on pursuing a career in art, so she's in the right place.

ABOVE Desirae Dolan explains that she chose HARTS because she likes to listen to music. "Not only do I like music, but I also like to sing," said Desirae. She finds the classes in HARTS easier compared to another house.
