

Top Left Senior Shayla Kirkland applies ghostly makeup to her friend Jerome McWilliams, senior. "Being apart of Ghost Out made me feel like I was isoated or in another world. But at least I got out of class for a good cause," Shayla explained.

Top Right The Grim Reaper steals another victim, sophomore Kayla Miller. "Ghost Out made students realize how many people could die from drunk driving. I'm defintely doing it next year."

Right Several ghosts continue to eat their lunch in silence. "Ghost Out helped spread awareness about drunk driving. Staying sober is important because alcohol impaires your abilities," junior, Miranda Saunders responded.

Senior Camden Wiggins tries his hardest to stay composed at lunch. "I think that Ghost Out helped students realize the dangers of drunk driving. The most difficult part about being a ghost was trying to do group work! If I wasn't a senior, I'd do it again."

Senior Amber Sanders takes on the task of staying silent. "Driving sober is very important because you have your life in your hands as well as everybody else's. Ghost Out gave students a revelation about how quickly someone can be lost."

Sophomore Ernest Glover is in the process of being transformed into a ghostly ghoul. "Driving sober is very important so you can protect others as well as yourself. This program makes people think about what could really happen."