

memorable- [mem-er-uh-buhl] -worth remembering; notable

As you walked in, the bright lights of Hollywood blinded you, and your shoes sank into the plush red carpet as you walked down it. Just walking on the red carpet made you feel as if you were actually at an A-List Hollywood movie premiere. The school gym was decorated to mimic a night out in Hollywood, with all the small and not so small touches that only "the city of big dreams," could be associated with. The girls were in their dress of choice and most were teetering in their high heels, while the boys were decked out in their tuxes to compliment the girls that they had escorted. This was prom, where for most it had been the seniors' last blow out with their peers before they left for college. So many memories were made in just one night. It was an unforgettable evening, whether it was remembered in a good way or in a bad way. Many say that these years should be the best years of your life, and by the time prom hit, you realized just how close your high school years were to ending. The only big thing to happen after prom is graduation and all the goodbyes that came with it.

