

well-rounded-[wel-roun-did] -having a broad educational background

Senior Kyle Matinson, a third year member, is the president of HOSA. Kyle said, "I would recommend others to join HOSA because it's a lot of fun. It's great that you get to meet new people at competitions."

HOSA

HOSA is a national organization approved by the U.S. Department of Education and the Health Occupations Division of the Association for Career and Technical Education. Being a part of HOSA gave students the opportunities to explore many different careers in the health field and meet people from all over the country that shared the same career goals. HOSA functions included guest speakers, community service projects, trips to medical facilities, and competitions. Competitions consisted of medical-base knowledge and skill events. HOSA was an organization to join for anyone looking to go into the health field.

Top Left While practicing patient care, senior Sierra Fishburne demonstrates the correct way to transport patients in their wheelchairs. Sierra said, "Being in HOSA gives me the experience I will need to work in a healthcare facility."

Bottom Left It's very important to wash your hands properly while working in healthcare. Senior Forrest Thomson, a third year HOSA member, stated, "Joining HOSA is a lot of fun. It gives you a lot of experience, better connections, and looks good on college applications."

Top Right While learning about the human body, juniors Julia Owens and Jessica Iralde, along with sophomore Jordyn Litchfield, work on a clay model of the human body. Julia Owens said, "Mrs. Bessinger told me I should join HOSA because it would help me figure out what field I would go into."

Bottom Right The members of HOSA gather together, decked out in pink to support breast cancer awareness. Being a part of HOSA was a good way to interact with other teens and prepare for your future.

