

outgoing- [out-go-ing] -friendly and socially confident

JV Volleyball

"Mine, mine, mine!" The girls of the junior varsity volleyball team hit it up on the court. Even though it was not a perfect season, the girls remained upbeat and were looking forward to the next season. Another year of experience is just what the girls need to help amp their game. Being members of the volleyball team has taught the girls how to work together to reach their goals and to practice good sportsmanship. Even though there were a lot of practices throughout the during the school year and throughout the summer, they believed it was well worth it. With students participating from the middle school, the team was very diverse and well acquainted. The girls were anticipating another hard-hitting opportunity.

Top Left Junior Jasmine Lawton sets up the ball as juniors Taynaya Myke and Keoisha Bingley covered her. Jasmine states that one rule she would've changed is the line judging.

Bottom Right Before a game, the JV volleyball team goes through passing drills while warming up for some fierce competition.

Right Sophomore Madison Lucas leaps over the net to defend a shot. Her favorite thing about volleyball was "the feeling of making a good pass, hit, or serve."

Far Left Freshman Taylor Shuman passes the ball to the setter. "Being a part of the volleyball team has helped me by not being so shy and helps me work better together with a team," Taylor said.

Left Freshman Rachel Saxon, a middle hitter, blocks a hit back over the net. "Playing volleyball in P.E. is what sparked my interest to be on the volleyball team," said Rachel.