Under senior captains, Jordyn Litchfield and Emily Hiott, the 2013 Varsity Volleyball team certainly flourished. The girls gave up most of their free time to practice almost every day over the summer and continued to practice every day after school throughout the fall. It was certainly not all work and no play for these girls--their practices often included constructive games such as "6 on 6" and "Doghouse." The varsity girls finished the season with a record of 10 wins and 11 losses. One of their most impressive achievements included their victory over Summerville, the first time in the school's history for volleyball. Overall, the Lady Cougars played a very successful season and hope to be even more prosperous in seasons to come.

Senior and team captain, Jordyn Litchfield serves an ace for yet another point. Jordyn felt that being captain this season had not only improved her leadership skills on and off the court, but also helped her to work better with others.

Senior Bianca Epps awaits the serve to begin defense. One of Bianca's favorite memories from this season was when she and her team went to camp at the College of Charleston over the summer. Bianca recalled how much fun they had getting frozen yogurt together during one of their breaks.
