The junior varsity football team surely proved how much hard work pays off during the course of this season. Under newcomer, Coach Markatine, the team finished the season with three wins and six losses. Some of their most impressive games included that against the Stratford Knights and their victory during their last game against Bluffton. When asked how he felt about this season, sophomore Nikeal Simmons said, "I feel like we've improved a lot from where we were last year." The JV participated in Breast Cancer Awareness Month, so the team wore their bright pink socks during Pink Out Night. The team's success this season hopefully predicts even more prosperity in the future.

Sophomore, Linzell Williams, 35, gets in a ready position to make a play. "I think this season was very inspiring. It shows how hard work pays off." With determination in his eyes and spirit in his heart, he was prepared to tackle another challenging team.

Sophomore Charles Bailey, 68, looks to the sidelines for instruction from one of his coaches before a play. When asked his overall thoughts on the season, Charles said simply that, "it was fun while it lasted."
