

3 4 JV girls' basketball

Freshman Chyanei Moultrie-Ford navigates around the block to shoot a three pointer. "I have been playing since I was a little girl. It really helps me stay focused and it keeps me out of trouble," stated Chyanei.

Coach Iesha Burns stands tall with her team as she encourages them to carry on their story. No matter how tough or how easy the game may seem, she pushed them to give it their all out on the court.

Freshman Tiyrah Green, dribbles her way around one of the Summerville players to get a clear shot for a pass. Facing one of CCHS's biggest rivals always invited a gym full of fans and promised a nail-biting game.

1

Senior Deja Jamison steals the ball from one of Fort Dorchester's players. Deja's teammates cleared a path for her to take the ball in for an easy lay-up.

2

The young Lady Cougars had a lot to learn about their path in life when it came to their role as a JV basketball player. By joining the basketball team, they learned to trust in themselves and in their coaches. Coach Burns worked hard with Coach Washington alongside assistant coaches, Branshea Brown and Shyda Stephens, to tell the story of the young players. Even though the scoreboard came up a couple points short, they still produced victories. Basketball was more than a game to these girls. "I think basketball defines who you are because you have to work hard to play basketball, and you have to have perseverance," stated sophomore Samantha Calcutt. Working hard truly paid off for the JV Lady Cougars, producing a successful season with more to come.

"I fell in love with the game at a very young age. When I didn't really have anything other than family, basketball was always there. We have each others' backs." -Sophomore Charese Taylor

