"Thinking outside the box is a metaphor that means to think differently, or from a new perspective. This phrase often refers to novel or creative thinking. We challenge you to think outside the box- to look at things from a different perspective and to stretch your mind beyond the realm of possibilities."

Family, dedication, and teamwork are three of the many words that define the Band of Blue. This year's marching show was called, "Out of The Box." The band worked hard during the summer in a two-week long band camp to learn music and drill, diligently practicing throughout the school year, thus producing a very successful performance. The Band of Blue held its annual events, one being a traditional Band Classic. The band also participated in parades, concert festivals, winter percussion, and winter guard. The Band of Blue placed 12th at the South Carolina Band Directors Association State Championships. The members gained friends and memories that will last them a lifetime.

Senior Nadia Bowlin's least favorite memory is "band camp". Her favorite memory is "being on the field at state and spending time with my friends". "Always try your hardest, because it goes by fast; there's never enough time."

While many students gain different things in band, senior Eric Ferguson gained "leadership skills and better attitudes". Eric has been in band for 7 years, and drumming has been an "escape" for him the entire time. "You only have four years or so, so make the best of it."

Senior Jessie Crandall moved here from Alabama for his sophomore year. Being in a new band and environment didn't affect him much though. "Within the first week of being here, they treated me like I'd been here my whole life."

Junior Makayla Smalls started band her 6th grade year. She states, "band does so much for me; it's a group of people who come together with common goals to create a family that will last a lifetime." She has gained "unforgettable memories, lifetime friends, and a place to call 'home'."
