

Girls Tennis

Small but mighty, the CCHS Girls Tennis team worked hard all season. While playing some of the hardest teams in the Lowcountry, such as Bluffton, Ashley Ridge, and Summerville, the girls ended with a final record of 7-6 for the season. Even through the losses, the girls kept their spirits high and continued to motivate each other throughout the matches. Having so few people on the team, the girls have grown close. With seniors leaving soon to attend college, the girls closed the season with heavy hearts and great memories. They gave it all they could and left their mark on the courts. "Always give 110%" is a quote all players could identify coming from their coach, Allyson Griffin. All players love support from their coach, something Coach Griffin was glad to give.

Senior Taleyah Washington gets ready to swing during one of her last matches of the season. She explained, "this is a bittersweet moment, but keep the good work girls; this is goodbye."

Freshman Anni Crook gets in position to serve. She stated, "I play tennis because it makes me free. It is a way of life to me now."

Junior Deidra Haynes started playing tennis because her friend played, but now she wants to pursue it. Deidra said, "I hope to play at the University of South Carolina."

Sophomore Carlyle Griffin watches her fellow teammates play their matches. She said, "we have a small team and we've all played together for a couple of years now so we are much more than a team, we're a family. Supporting each other comes naturally now."

Senior Megan Mitchell has grown up around tennis. She has been playing since she was three years old. She expressed, "I will miss my team, they are a good group of girls. It's been a good run, and I wish the best for them."

Freshman Cammi Crook gets ready for her opponent's serve. She stated, "during a hard match I think about my team. I want to win for them, because we all deserve it. The tennis girls support me when I don't do well during a match, and that helps me a lot."
