

JV SOFTBALL

JV softball teammates cheer on their teammate at bat as freshman Dominique Moore (# 18) stands ready to be the next batter, carefully watching to see how the opposing team's pitcher will throw.

The Colleton County JV Softball team made it to third in regionals. Assistant coach Simeon Hammonds says, "I always regard every season as a process. It's going to start off slow, but the girls improve every day. You can see them improve, and as the season progresses. They're starting to grasp the concept of a team and the benefits of putting in hard work." These girls don't weigh heavily on one person when they play; they all work together. They pull each other up when one of them is down, they encourage each other, and they give each other constructive criticism when needed. Softball is more than just a game to these girls, it's a sisterhood.

Sophomore Kydaisia Holmes (# 10) waits in the outfield for the opposing batter to hit the ball so she can catch it and strike them out.

Left: The Colleton County JV Softball girls huddle together on field to discuss their next moves and to keep each other motivated to win.

Top: Freshman Ashlyn Hammonds (# 12) readies herself to pitch the ball at the batter from the opposing team with hopes of striking them out.

Bottom: Freshman Shardaja Adams (# 14) launches the ball to another teammate as the batter from the opposing team makes a run for second base.
