Why did you get up at the crack of dawn everyday to go to school? Was it the thought of memorizing algebraic formulas, sitting through history lectures, or lugging a twenty pound back-pack to each class? Most likely, the answer to these questions is no. To some, essays, term papers, tests, and homework were what school was about. While this academic side was a part of school, there was much more to a student's life.

One didn't need to look too far to find another side, for there were friends and socializing, dances, and all the festivities of Homecoming week which included spirit days, the big game, the halftime parade, and the dance that night. One could also find excitement during Halloween time when the carnival took place. School was more than studying and work, for it was having fun and getting involved, whether it was student government or the social scenes. In other words, it was just a GRAND way of life!

Dinner anyone? Students at CPA are always trying new things. Detra Stanfill has prepared a nice meal before the haunted house. Would you like to try some "Melissa Hinton."
