

New club formed to involve students and increase spirit

STUDENTS MAKING A CHANGE

During teacher orientation in August, the students who attended Teen Institute spoke to the teachers concerning their experience at and their desire to form a club with the same goals and ideals. Thus, the SMAC club was created.

The students that attended summer camp asked for support from parents and faculty in being involved in student's school lives. The goal of the SMAC club was to increase school spirit and pride for the school. It also encouraged members to participate in the many drug and alcohol prevention programs they sponsored. One of these activities was a presentation given by Charleston police chief, Reuben Greenburg. He spoke of the many dangers and horrible things he had seen on the streets because of drugs and he urged students to think very carefully about drug abuse.

Another activity the SMAC club sponsored was the caravan to the Thomas Heyward football game. They decorated cars with balloons, streamers and posters. SMAC showed everyone you don't need drugs or alcohol to have a good time.

Student body president learns about school politics through banking program

Asher Howell Student Body President attended a meeting in Aiken sponsored by Palmetto Federal Savings and Loan Bank. The meeting's purpose was to teach about banking and financial issues. Asher was one of many class presidents from other schools who attended.

SMAC Club executive committee including Marnie Amerson, Landis Williams, Asher Howell, and President, Shelley White.

SMAC club officers, Landis Williams and Marnie Amerson, listen to the ideas members have about the club.