

G

Not Just Fun And Games

GO ALL OUT

The Junior Varsity Cheerleaders of 1991-92 had a special quality that people could not actually see. But, if they just opened their ears and listened, they would know. The J.V. girls may have looked small, but their voices were very big! The sounds of encouraging cheers were always heard as fans stopped to take notice. The squad performed the moves with great accuracy and skill. Many hours were spent preparing for each game and pep rally, but the girls know that it was all worth it.

Danielle Dantzler and Cara Valentine perform their dance during halftime. The cheerleaders played an important role in supporting the football team through an undefeated season.

When they congratulated their team after a victorious game, the cheerleaders felt as if they had played an important part in winning.

The squad was a great help to the Varsity Cheerleaders. The two groups often joined forces to present better pep rallies. At the Varsity football games, the girls sold programs and painted faces.

Not only were the cheerleaders a great help to the Varsity teams, but also to their own. They were always there to add the intensity and fervor to pull their team through.

The 1991 J.V. Cheerleaders: Standing (L-R) Kemp Marks, Ashleigh Padgett, Kimberly Smith, Corinne Brittle (sponsor), Leigh Anne Bennett and Cara Valentine. Kneeling (L-R) Laurel Anne Oswald, Carmon Valentine, Amy Godley, Danielle Dantzler, Stephanie Padgett and Angie Sweat.

Kimberly Smith, freshman, Amy Godley, freshman, and Ashleigh Padgett, eighth, strike a pose in their room at cheerleading camp held at Columbia College. Camp went well for the girls; they won an award for their performance in the dance competition.

