

T

Nothing But The Best

THE SKY'S THE LIMIT

Pure energy and spirit were always felt by each player, cheerleader, and fan at the J.V. boys' basketball games. The Hawks did not have a lot of size, but they had all the quickness and talent they needed in order to have a fabulous season. Even with the loss of key players who moved up to varsity, the boys worked together as a team to prove what they were made of. The addition of new players gave the coach a broad choice of players to fill the different positions.

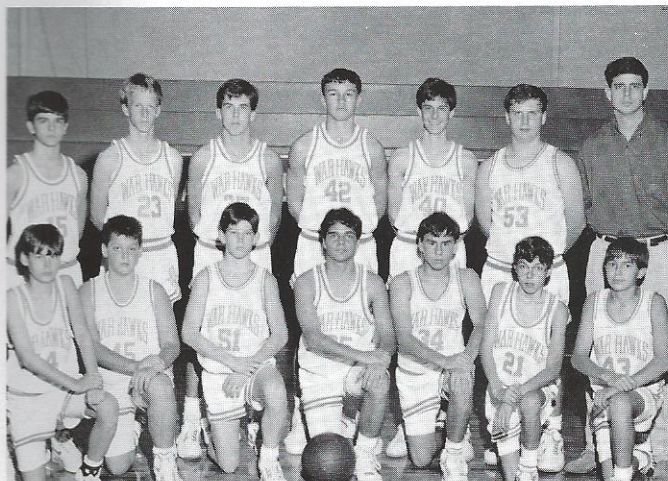

Some of the boys were given the chance to play with the Lee Stringfield, a beginner for the JV Hawks carefully blocks the pass of his opponent without fouling. All those annoying but necessary drills at practice do help in the long run.

Varsity against Lord Berkley because many of the Varsity Hawks were out with illness. A great deal of the game was played by J.V. players only. Not only did these young men play competitively against a team that was much older, but they beat the team by fifty points.

Determination and a love for the game drove the team through a victorious season. The J.V. Hawks liked the feeling of being on top and knew that no one could bring them down. Being Tournament Champions is a feeling these players won't soon forget.

1991 JV Hawks: standing (L-R) Garner Regenovich, Patrick Ritter, Brandon Sauls, Wes Pye, Clay Folk, Ashley Woodard, Coach Mike Green; kneeling: (L-R) Hunter White, Chad Spell, Joe McConnell, Perry Hunt, Brandon Hiott, Lee Stringfield, Kin Kinsey.

Brandon Sauls shoots the ball over the heads of his opponents while Patrick Ritter sets up for the rebound. The Hawks felt a strong sense of teamwork and this greatly influenced their performance. The season not only taught them to work together but also to be responsible.

