

7 through The Years

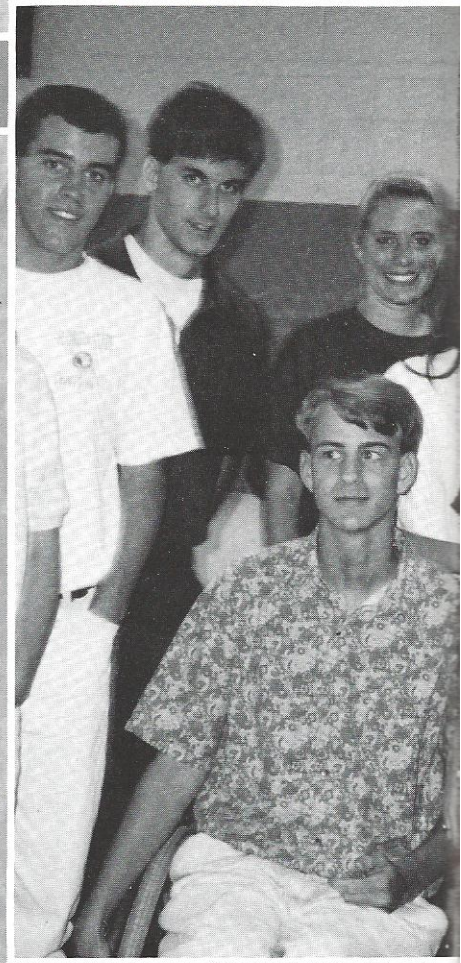

When the freshman class of 1994 walked through the doors of the high school building, they knew they had a long and tough road ahead of them. As the years passed, they have made many memories, good and bad, and stuck together when times were tough. New friends have come and old friends gone, each for their own reason. The ones that remain have almost finished that road and now have become seniors, the Class of 1994.

Through the years the class as a whole has accomplished many goals. As freshmen, they learned how to speak a different language in Mrs. Folk's Spanish I class, and found out what high school was all about. In the tenth grade, everyone toughed it out together in Mrs. Smoak's history and Mrs. Linder's English class. The next year was a year of disagreements, arguments, and many meetings. Trying to put together a haunted house, homecoming dance, and Junior/Senior Prom was a task. Raising money for these things was difficult, but they did it by selling magazines, doughnuts, and washing cars. Now they are seniors and preparing themselves for graduation by visiting colleges and deciding what college to attend, ordering caps and gowns, making sure their grades are good, and taking the SAT or ACT.

The senior class has come together through the years, and this togetherness will be remembered after graduation, when each student will go his separate way always remembering what made him a part of the Class of 1994.

The senior class welcomes back the newlywed Mrs. Jason Reeves, by giving her a party with snacks and a three-tiered wedding cake made by Mrs. Fralix.

Recess was always a great time to have fun.

Trey Asbelle and Steven English, along with another classmate, liked to play touch football on the playground.

Steven English looks thrilled at the test just given to him by his teacher. Do any of the questions look familiar?
