Crew

If an outsider were to come to Colleton Prep during the week of Homecoming, he would be in for a total surprise. Every day of Spirit Week is a special day with a special name. On each of the days, the students come dressed according to the day. On Monday, "Kris Kross Day," students wore their clothes backwards. "Pajama Day" followed, with people dressed in their night clothes. On "Mourn the Rebels Day" students wore black, symbolizing the hoped victory over Country Day. "Country Redneck Day" was the day the halls were filled with students dressing as Rednecks. The week ended with "Blue and White Day" where the students showed their Hawk Spirit by dressing in blue and white and participating in the biggest Pep Rally of the year.

At the Pep Rally, students from Kindergarten through third grade competed in a spirit wagon competition, where each class decorated wagons with spirit paraphernalia. The third grade was judged "most spirited". Students in grades four through twelve competed in a skit competition, where each class presented an original skit about the Hawks and the Country Day Rebels. The winners of the skit competition were the fourth graders.

Here come the Country Day Hillbillies . . . The sixth grade performed a skit in which they told a tale about the Country Day Rebels. John Osteen, Brooks Morehead, Moya Moberly, and Amanda Morrissey are dressed as the Country Day Hillbillies on their way to Hawk territory.

True Country Boys . . . Bud Herndon and Michael Stone went all out on "Country Redneck Day" to show their spirit. Bud, dressed as a country farmer, and Michael, dressed as a hunter, try to impersonate the Country Day Rebels that the Hawks hope to defeat.

Blue and White Attack . . . These girls have spirit written all over their faces. Lindsay Davenport, Garnett Johnston, and Ashleigh Padgett show their support for the War Hawks by painting their faces blue and white on Friday.
