Graduation is not only a time to bid farewell to what you have known, but it is also a time to greet change with open arms. When the clock struck eight on May 28, the lives of the graduating class of 1993 were changed forever. Seniors bid farewell to their family at Colleton Prep during the graduation ceremony. The two most outstanding students, Holly Davenport and Randee Ritter, presented speeches filled with pride and respect for their fellow classmates. South Carolina Representative Tommy Hartnett also provided a few words of wisdom for the graduating class.

Graduation is a time to move on. To the Kindergarten class of 1993, this meant moving up on the lower school totem pole. Molly O'Quinn, Christina Crosby, and Lindsey Creech welcomed the audience. Following their presentation, Michael Hickman, Ryan Bishop, and Jacob Morris led everyone in saying the Pledge of Allegiance and in singing "America". The Kindergarten class gave a performance of their favorite play followed by a recitation of the alphabet. Mr. Quarles presented individual diplomas, and K.C. Campbell and Jessica Johnson ended the ceremony with a farewell speech.

Proud . . . Garnett Johnston and Cope Johnston share a close and unique relationship; for they are not just sisters, they're friends.

Close for so long . . . Holly Davenport, Dargan Rowe, and Harper Kinsey stop for their first picture as Colleton Prep Alumni. After being together in the same class for so long, they are now forced to go their own separate ways. This, however, will not stop these girls from keeping in touch.
