

Headmaster Raymond Quarles smiles proudly as he begins to cut the ribbon for opening day of the school's first post office. Ansley Bailey, postmaster for the first session, anxiously awaits.

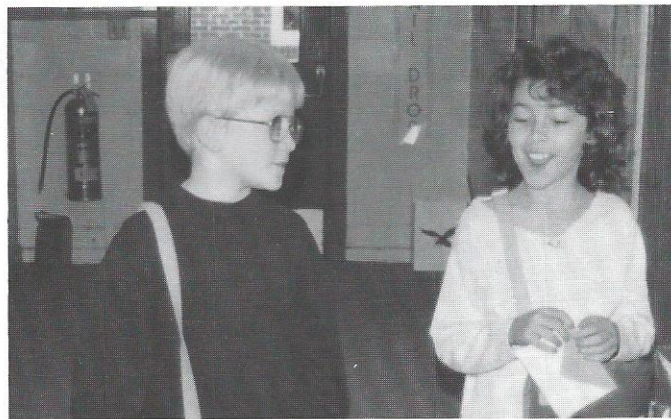

Being a mail sorter is not as easy as it looks. Sloane Upchurch and Sarah Kirby Dutton find out about separating mail. They stamp the letters, then place them in certain boxes depending on location.

Will Thomas, Ashley Smith, and Jack Beasley listen carefully as Mr. Wendell Butterfield of the Walterboro Post Office explains the importance of their positions.

"The Warhawk Post Office has added tremendous support to the children's reading and writing skills. It has made these subjects a lot more fun for them," replied Heidi Bailey, Wee Delivery advisor.

John-Michael Mayer and Terri-Lyn Steedly find out that being letter carrier requires a lot of walking. They deliver to all three buildings.
