

Jon Baggett, Patrick Ritter, Jennifer Beach, and Amy Godley are all very excited. They have just been chosen to represent the school at Teen Institute held at Coker College.

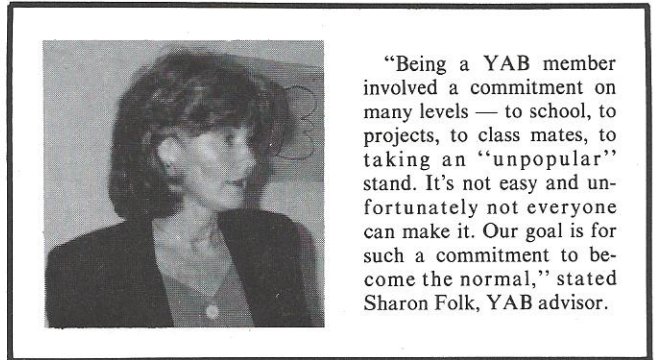

Ashley Woodard, one of the new members, works hard hanging up the streamers for Halloween. The YAB has decorated the halls for all occasions — sports, holidays, and graduation!

Karate? No, but just as serious. Jon Baggett and Patrick Ritter are engaged in a game that requires skill, memory, and quickness. This game is only one of the many ideas they learned at Teen Institute.

Tina Patel listens attentively to the qualifications of her new position in the YAB. Tina is the representative to the P.T.O. She will attend all monthly meetings to serve as a voice for the students.

“Being a YAB member involved a commitment on many levels — to school, to projects, to class mates, to taking an “unpopular” stand. It’s not easy and unfortunately not everyone can make it. Our goal is for such a commitment to become the normal,” stated Sharon Folk, YAB advisor.

Jennifer Beach carefully paints a heart for red ribbon week on Elizabeth Smoak’s cheek.
