

F

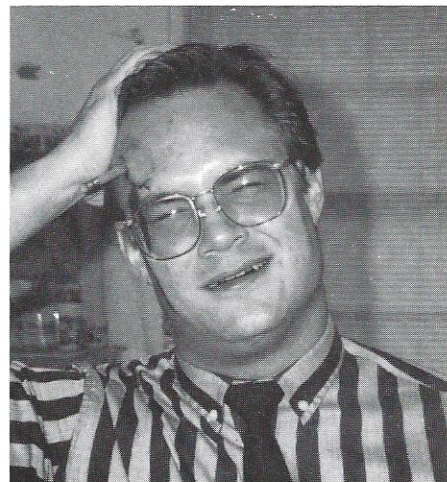

ORMING FRIENDSHIPS

Unique friendships made during Secret Pal Week are put to a scary test on Halloween.

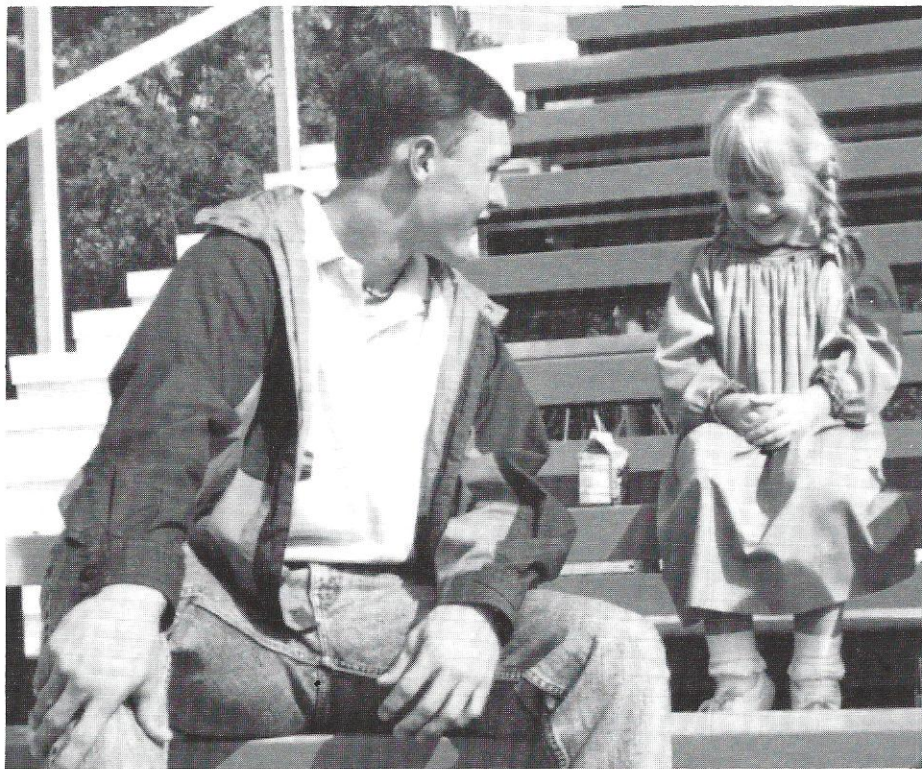

Ansley Bailey receives a bag of goodies from her secret pal, Ginger Speaks.

Students at CPA formed long-lasting friendships every day by working together and sharing experiences, especially during Secret Pal Week and Halloween. Secret Pal Week provided interaction between students of all ages, as younger students received the opportunity to become friends and share a picnic lunch with their older role models. On Halloween, students worked together to coordinate the activities at the Fall Festival. The Junior class spent countless hours building the Haunted House, which served as a major fundraiser for the class. As they continued to work together in the Haunted House, the Juniors formed friendships that will last a lifetime.

Is this Mr. Dittmer's Halloween costume, or has the stress of teaching gotten to him.

What better way to start the school year then by making new friends? Jessica Upchurch laughs with Wes Pye during the Secret Pal picnic. Secret Pal Week is a wonderful sharing experiences that helps students from all grades interact.

"Secret Pal Week was neat because this year instead of being the younger pal, we got to be a Secret Pal to a younger student and give them gifts."

— Carrie Tyler

