

1942 WILDCATS

The 1942 Wildcats have done a mighty fine job considering the handicaps that they encountered. Our first game of the season was the only time that the complete Cat squad took the field together. From this first game on, they were beset by injury after injury; and at one time during mid-season there were fifteen men out with one kind of injury or the other. This did not keep the fighting Wildcats down though, they stayed right in there and fought all the way—showing up exceptionally well; and finished the season with a 24-14 victory over the favored Citadel eleven.

Individual star of this year's team was Dave Spencer who shone in every game, and at the end of the season was selected to participate in the North Carolina-South Carolina College All-Star game; and he was also chosen to play in the annual North-South game in Montgomery, Alabama. Captain Frank Caldwell, an inspirational leader to the team through the entire season, was also selected to participate in the North Carolina-South Carolina game, and was the starting center for North Carolina. Men that will be missed on Davidson's 1942 squad are Caldwell, Miller, Hay, Woodward, Spencer, Smith, Faison, Bell, Hipp, Shaw, Marsh, Shannon, Hackney, and Henderson.
