

Caroline:

In March of 1980, there was a historical snowstorm in Charleston. Later that month, more history was made. We finally got something we had been wanting for a long time; the gift of a wonderful daughter. You have truly added fun and excitement to our lives, and we will miss you terribly when you leave to begin your next phase in life. We look for you to succeed at breaking down walls that have rarely been chipped at before. You are the living arrow sent from our bow. We have tried to be a stable bow to help you find your mark. Go get 'em, Tiger!
