

Casey

There can be no parents in the world more proud of a child than we are of you. You have always been a joy to be around, sometimes teaching us lessons along the way when we were supposed to be teaching you. I knew you were trouble the first time I dressed you up pretty and put the bow in your hair only for you to tear it out. You have always walked your own path to your own drummer; you always wanted the softball instead of the baby doll. We would not change a thing.

Your determination has been your strength, keep it in check and know the difference in strength and being bullheaded, always remember you learn more by listening than talking. But most of all as you have taught all of us, you can't have rainbows without the big world to conquer all of your dreams.

Love you forever,
Mom and Dad

Casey,
We have been thru thick and thin together, I would not have it any other way. Have fun in college.

Love,
James
