

SEPTEMBER

School opened in mid-September, delayed because the new high school building had not been completed. John C. was different - almost twice as large. It was, despite all the usual protests, good to be back, to see old friends, and meet new ones.

Immediately, school activities engulfed us: getting schedules straightened out; stumbling into French class when we were supposed to be in government; buying ribbons on Friday morning; football games on Friday nights; getting the junior class canteen set up . . .
