

School life had taken on its usual rhythm - tests, book reports, every now and then a warning slip to harass us.

The juniors thought only in dollar signs, and were quickly learning the financial facts of life.

