

the mystery and beauty of old ruins - old graves, old churches, old houses - haunting us with what once was - what will never be again the knowledge that what we are is the summation of all the years that have preceded us - all the labors, the risks, the failures, the accomplishments of thousands who have walked these very paths before us.

