A Year Worth

Who could forget the first day of school, clinging to his mother's side in fear of being abandoned. The room was filled with "little" strangers, each holding a small lunch box and a bright colored book sack. But as time past, things got better. The shyness wore off, and classmates were no longer strangers but friends. In fact, they actually looked forward to school. Learning was a new and exciting experience.

Kindergarten included more than just numbers and the alphabet. There was the thrilling ride on the fire truck — each child dreaming of being a fireman after the ride was over. The children also had their first appearance on stage during the annual kindergarten play. The themes stretched from "It's a Small World" to "Mother Goose." The year came to a close as tearful eyes of parents watched their child, dressed in white cap and gown, receive their diploma. It was not the end; it was the start of a new beginning.

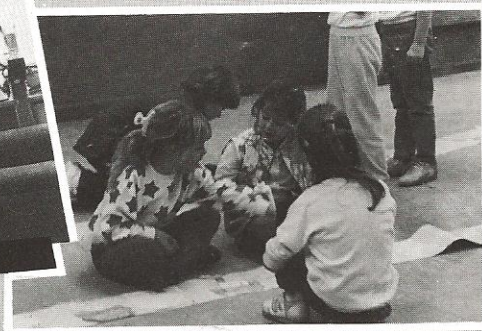

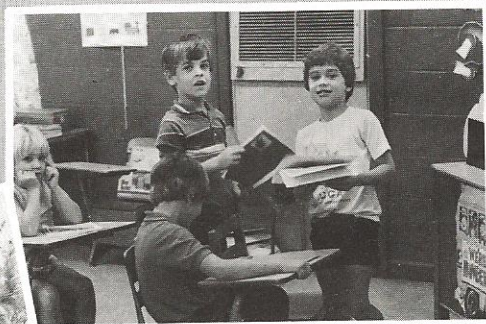

First grade held great wonders. Every Wednesday of show-and-tell the children shared their favorite toys with the class. Then, there was the exciting trip to Charles-town Landing. Next came second grade, then third, which included South Carolina history and multiplication.

Soon a whole new group of young faces took over the lower and middle schools, as the others experenced the new busy life of the high school. Each year was different, with new things to learn, see, and do. Each was "A Year Worth Looking Into!"

Lights . . . camera . . . action! The big opening night of the kindergarten play was an outstanding success!

Unfortunately, they are a little too young to be volunteer firemen, but that doesn't mean they're not willing to try.

"Do I have to wear goggles? I feel stupid!" Scott Pellum, Chad Brightwell, and David Strickland will soon learn the importance of lab safety rules.

It Was Worth It!

"I know that teacher hates me!", "How could she give us all that homework!", "We can't have three tests in one day!", "An F! How could I have made an F!" How impossible the school year seemed. All that work and time spent on studying for the "killer" test.

Study this, write that, read this book, write that term paper; preparing for college and the future was a hard and drawn out task. But in between the homework and school projects there was always a time for fun and a time to relax.

Class parties and club activities helped the students enjoy the time spent at school and forget the frustrations of work. Soon, time began to fly by. Before they knew it, it was an end to another school year. After all those days of begging for summer they actually felt a touch of sadness when cleaning out their lockers. It was over; all the hard work and early mornings. It was more than just learning about books; it was learning about life and ... It Was Worth It!

Library assistant, Dee Ann Simmons, takes time to help Michael Warren find the perfect book for his report.

Sharing

Memories were not worth having unless there was someone to share them with — special times spent with special people. It was hard to remember who became friends first. Just one warm smile paved the way to a new and lasting friendship.

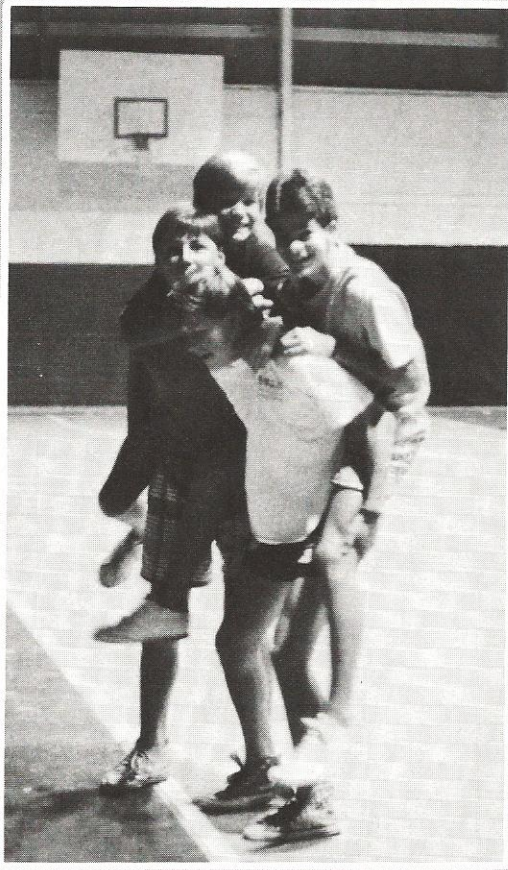

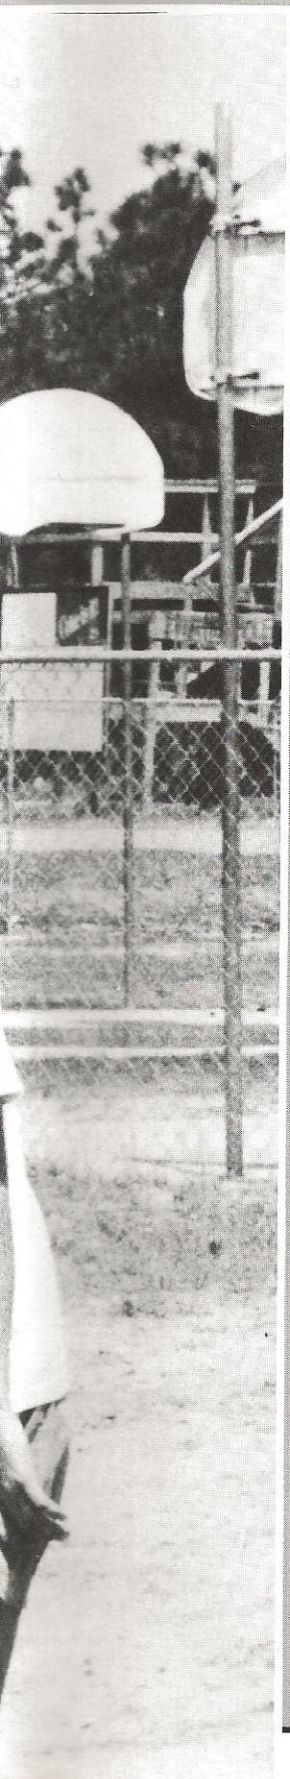

As the year progressed, so did the relationships between classmates. They became more than just friends; they were family. Each shared his trust, fears, and inner most secrets with the other, forming a special bond of loyalty between the two.

As the year came to a close, a sense of sadness could be felt in the halls. With summer ahead, friends would go their separate ways — graduating, moving to the beach, working summer jobs. Although they would be apart, their wonderful memories would not be forgotten. Unfortunately, the school year ended, but the friendships made between students and faculty never died.

This could be a start to a beautiful relationship. Vivion Hiott and William Cromer share crayons while coloring their pictures. Don't they make a cute couple?

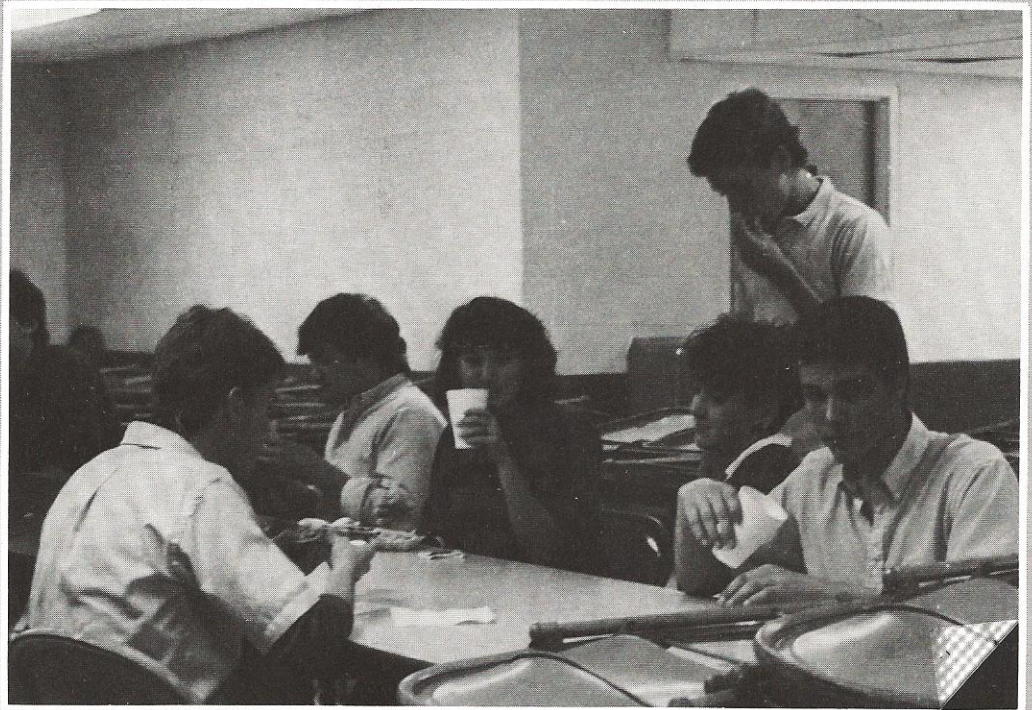

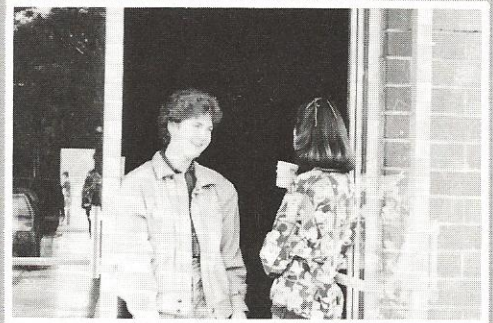

Although not the usual competitive sport, ninth graders attempt to have chicken fights during P.E.

Who can forget sharing and fighting over the see-saw and swings during recess.

Between gulping down french fries and chewing hamburgers, friends get together to exchange a few words.

Did you hear about _____? Allison Nettles and Toni Wilson catch up on the weekend gossip during break.

No! You can not wear shorts to school. Becky Bennett and Chris Rowe display their athletic abilities on field day.

Remembering

These were the best years of their lives — their High School years. It was a time of being young, full of energy and life, a time of learning new things and looking ahead to a brighter future. As minds grew, so did personalities. No two years were ever the same. With each school season there came new faces carrying new ideas and many new changes.

The school was more than academics; it was full of athletics and activities. There was something for everyone. Clubs, parties, proms, carnivals, games, and tournaments; the list stretched for miles. Each student was needed to fill a position. Participating in these activities gave the student a sense of importance and responsibility. They did not work on an individual basis but they worked as a group, a family. Looking back through the season, students shared special memories of school. Whether it was their first kiss on prom night or that winning touchdown they made at the Homecoming game, the memories were there; the memories of the best years of their lives.

Is it really Mini Mouse! Unfortunately, no. On Halloween all the kindergarteners dress in their favorite costumes.

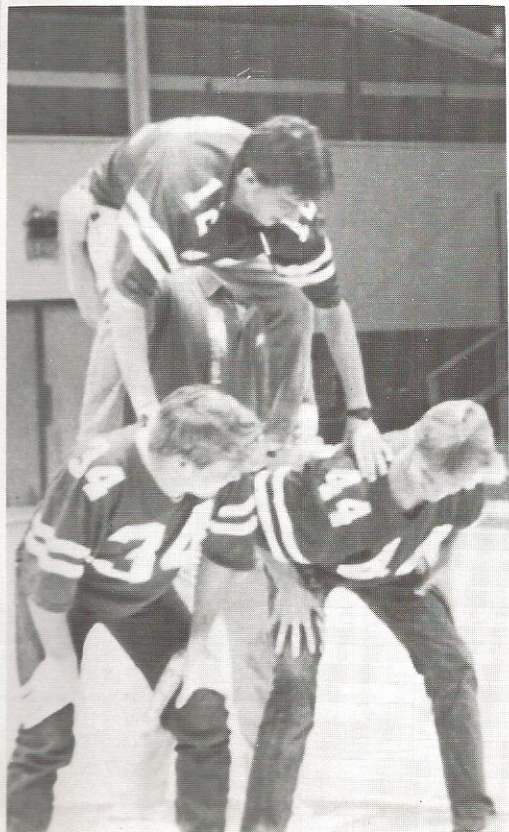

The kindergarteners aren't the only ones who dress up for Halloween. The Seniors display their original costumes to the lower school.

Who could forget the excitement of the pep rallies? Not these children!

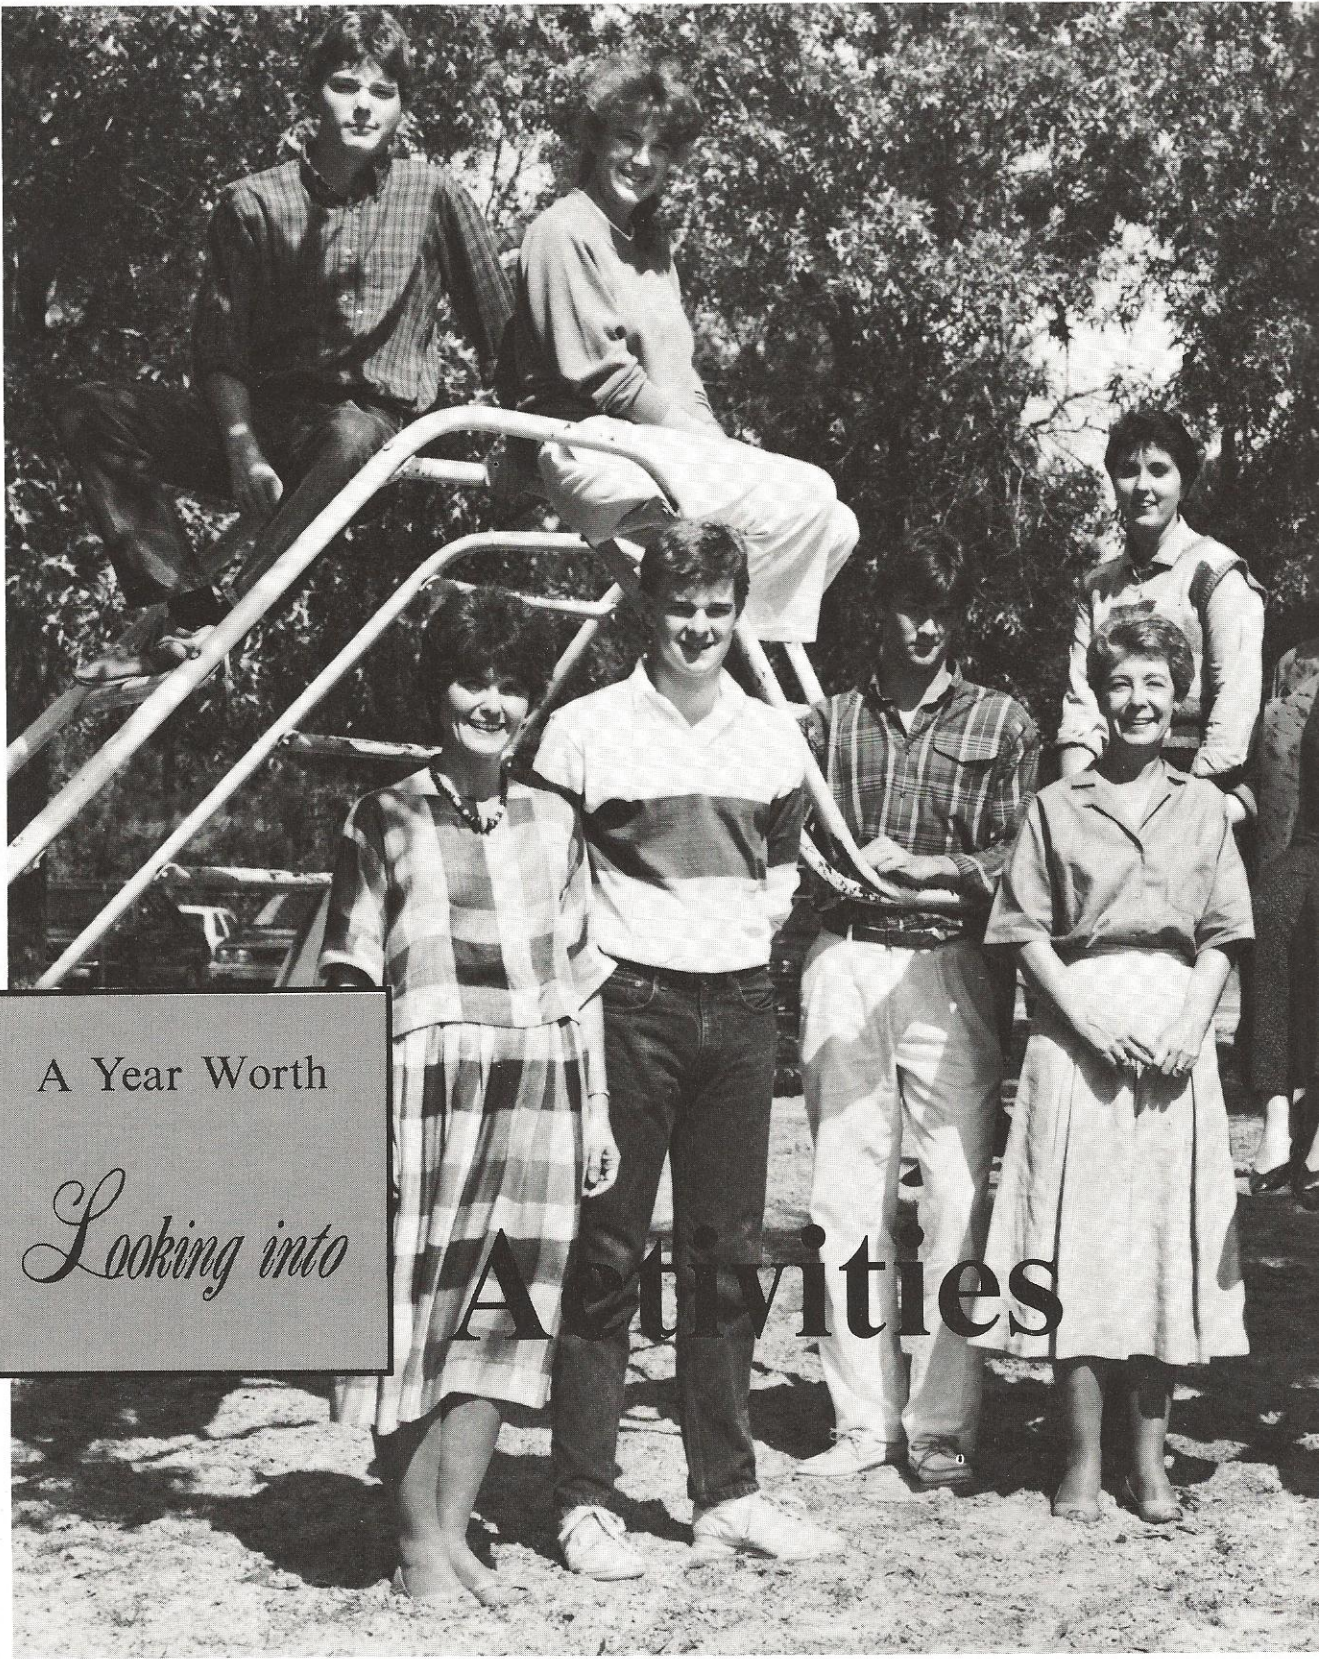

These football players seem to think they can build better pyramids than the cheerleaders. What a joke!

The Senior boys show their outrageous style in clothes. Thank goodness they can only do this during spirit week.

Don't the Junior boys' personalities just jump out of this picture?

ACTIVITIES EDITOR

In addition to being a yearbook editor, Wendy Litchfield is a member of Student Council, Lady Hawks basketball, and the softball team.

"A cut above the rest" certainly described these talented students. Their exceptional achievements in both academics and extra curricular activities made them stand out among the students at John C. They were recognized by both the school and public of Walterboro for their excellent abilities. Whether they were in or out of school, they always did more than what was asked of them. Congratulations to these outstanding students.

CUT ABOVE THE REST

One important program that started this year was the student exchange program. Students experienced and learned different systems of teachings from other schools. Cindy Smith visited Calhoun Academy. Allyson Haynes and Chad Brightwell spent a day at Lord Berkeley.

LEADERSHIP

This year's Student Council was hard at work planning fund raisers, cleaning the school grounds, and organizing helpful programs. They distributed food to the needy by handing out Thanksgiving baskets. They also took up food for the SPCA.

The S.C.I.S.A. Association sponsored a student exchanged program in which John C. eagerly participated. The students from Lord Berkeley and Calhoun Academy that visited our school received a very warm welcome.

LEADING THE WAY

The students that work hard throughout the year were rewarded for their academic achievements by becoming a member of the National Honor Society. It consisted of both Juniors and Seniors who maintained a grade point average of 90 or above.

This year the N.H.S. helped host a Regional Spelling Bee. Children in grades four through eight participated. They also helped with the Academic Bowl and once a week they volunteered their services to the library. These students represented John C. in both academics and school spirit.

THE WINNING EDGE

In the spring of '86, John C. Calhoun Academy hosted their third annual Academic Bowl sponsored by the P.T.O. Twenty schools participated. Each teacher from the different schools were asked to submit twenty-five questions. These questions covered such subjects as English, math, Science, history, and current events. One student from each grade was selected to compete in the bowl. Being able to participate was a special privilege and honor. The representatives from John C. were Matthew Addison, Madison Farrell, Bud Williams, Kevin Beach, and Melody Pearce.

As well as an Academic Bowl, John C. also had an excellent Academic Team. During September, they participated in the Winthrop Challenge. They competed against two schools, defeating one, but disappointingly losing to the other. Under the guidance of Mrs. Betty Linder and Mrs. Mimi Werntz, these students had a very successful year. The Academic Team consisted of four seniors, Madison Farrell, Gene Simmons, Robbie Hogan, and Brian Strickland.

MAKING MEMORIES

"The people behind the scenes" best described the dedicated members of the Talon staff. With little credit or thanks, these students helped make the memories and happy times at John C. Calhoun Academy come alive in one small but treasured book.

Before school opened, the staff members were hard at work selling ads and planning the start of a busy year. In July, the editors and a few members attended a yearbook workshop, sponsored by Josten's, at Converse College. Unfortunately, yearbook advisor, Mrs. Hawes, could not join her staff due to the expected birth of her first bouncing boy, Tyler Hawes. Luckily, Miss Laura Spears volunteered to chaperone the girls on their four day trip.

The nights of frustration, panic, exhaustion, and, of course, nightmares could never be seen by the outstanding outcome of the 1987 Talon. But each editor and photographer knew of the hard work and time that went into the yearbook. Although discouraged by their time limits, the photographers and the staff members kept on processing pictures, writing copy, and drawing layouts until the last deadline was completed.

The yearbook editors included Melody McGinnis — Editor-in-Chief, Debbie Powers — Sports, Allyson Haynes — Classes, Kim Carter — Academics, Wendy Litchfield — Activities, and Emily Warren — Ads. Photographers were Amy Goehring, Jamie Gahagan, Holly Roberts, and Renee Dennis. Business manager, Allison Nettles was stuck with the paper work.

More Pictures! Unfortunately, there's not enough pages for all of them. Mrs. Hawes and Melody McGinnis decide which ones to use.

---

"How much does it cost?" — Allison Nettles' famous words. Allison and Mrs. Hawes try to work out the budget.

PICTURE TAKING PEOPLE

Being a photographer for the Talon took a lot of time and patience. With deadlines to meet, they needed much dedication to keep all of the pictures straight.

The photographers processed and printed All of their film and pictures. The pictures had to be ready for the editors very soon after they were made.

this major responsibility. When asked, Mrs. Hawes said that, "without Amy things wouldn't have run as smoothly. I owe her a great big THANKS."

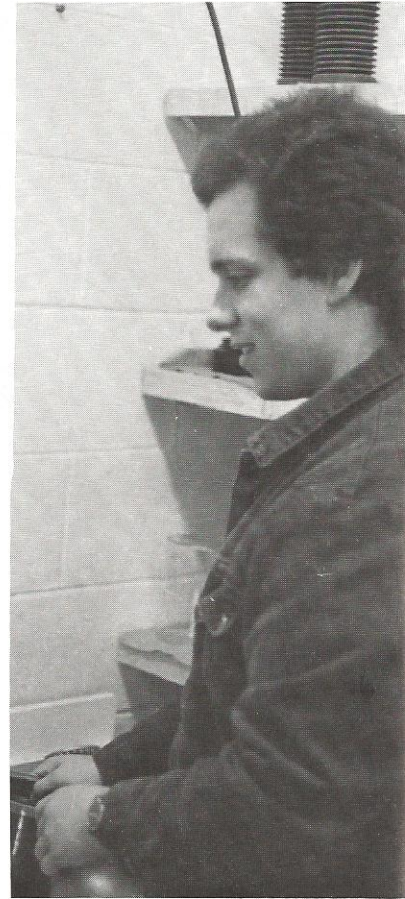

If it weren't for the photographers, there would be no pictures, therefore, no yearbook.

Amy Goehring hangs the pictures up after just processing them.

THE PEN PROVES MIGHTIER THAN THE SWORD

---

Mrs. Goehring looks for typing mistakes in the diction of the Santa Letters.

Computer wiz, Madison Farrell, takes a break from typesetting all of the copy for the newspaper.

For members of the Warhawk staff, the pen did prove mightier than the sword, and also a whole lot easier to write with. This group of talented students worked constantly to churn out an interesting, yet informative newspaper.

The reporters kept their eyes and ears open all year, sniffing out news that everyone wanted to hear. For example, did you know, "2nd grade, Thank you for making this a good year. Happy Valentine's Day. I love you all! Mrs. Bolt." This is just one of the many messages purchased for a dollar that were printed in the well-known and enjoyable Valentine's Day issue.

Class news included projects, special field trips and birthdays. Each issue also had a President's Corner, where Student Body President, Thomas Rowe, relayed his message to the students, faculty, and parents.

Mrs. Goehring discusses the upcoming paper with some editors to make sure all the copy is correct.

NO STOPPING THE PRESS

The photographers check the proofs to see if they are ones the editor wanted.

These special people are the editors of this years War Hawk.

The 1986-87 War Hawk staff was composed of over forty members. They were under the great guidance of Mrs. Betty Goehring.

The staff was comprised of mostly the sophomore, junior, and senior classes. Helping out the staff and editors were two photographers and one typesetting coordinator.

A lot of hard work went into the preparation of each issue of the War Hawk. The staff was constantly gathering information for the two editions published. Each issue of the War Hawk included class news, student spotlight, J.C.C.A. ABC's, and a general recap of the major events on the campus of John C. Calhoun Academy. The first edition contained the Seniors letters to Santa. The second closed the year with the Senior's last Will and Testament.

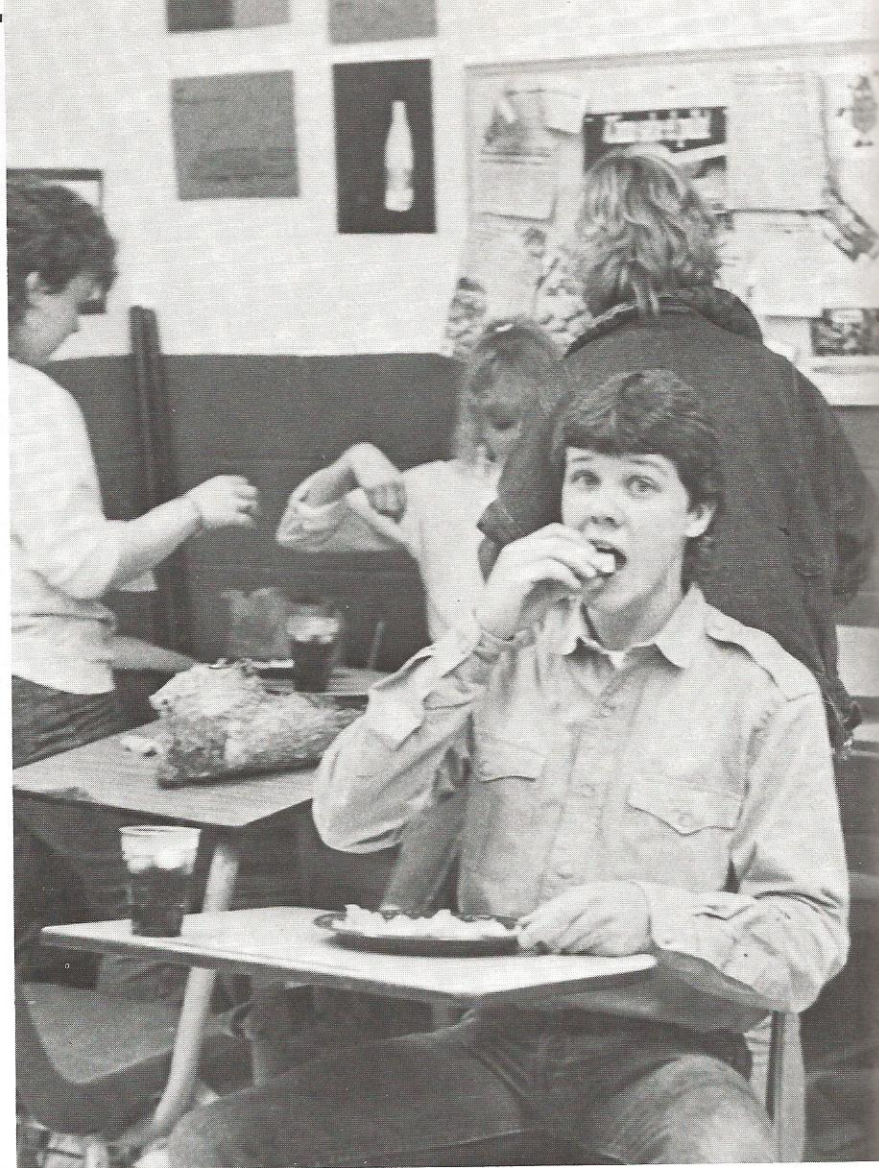

The following were the editors for each staff Features — Karen Nettles, Editor; Robin Jones, Sr. Ass't. Editor; Amy Goehring, Jr. Ass't. Editor. News Staff — Robbie Hogan, Editor; Johnnie Neal, Sr., Ass't. Editor; Allyson Haynes, Jr. Ass't. Editor; Ashley Hudson, Alumni News Editor. Sports Staff — Debbie Powers, Editor; Gene Simmons, Sr. Ass't. Editor; Cindy Smith, Jr. Ass't. Editor. Business Staff — Traci Warren, Business Manager; Jo Lynn Bennett, Sr. Ass't. Manager; Toni Hooker, Jr. Ass't. Manager. Photographers — Jamie Gahagan and Sandy Sanders. Typesetting Coordinator — Madison Farrell.

?HABLA USTED ESPANOL?

"?Habla Usted Espanol?" was a question frequently asked in the conversation in Mrs. Sharon Folk's Foreign Language Club. With Mrs. Folk in charge, there was never a dull moment. They celebrated each holiday and religious day by using Spanish customs. It seemed that every other week the halls were filled with the aroma of tacos and cheese. Pinatas hanging from the ceiling, showered candy to the members who broke them. Christmas gifts, placed in each other's shoes, were exchanged before Christmas vacation. These were just a few activities the Foreign Language Club had during the year.

The club officers were as follows: Eric McGill, President; Will Bryan, Vice President; Emily Warren, Secretary; Toni Wilson, Treasurer.

“Will you be my sponsor?” — the words every girl in high school were dying to hear. Unfortunately for them, there were only seven senior football players this year, so, there would be only seven lucky girls.

Before the start of the Homecoming game, the seven proud football players escorted their lovely sponsors across the field. It was their last season the high school football but their most memorable. On this special night, each senior was recognized for being team leaders, and each sponsor was honored to be their escorts.

THE SPIRIT OF '87

The excitement and anxiety of spirit week was displayed by every student. Being able to dress up in costumes and shorts was what made the week so fun. It wasn't like the same boring routine of each week; it was different. The week consisted of Hush-Button Day, the girls weren't allowed to talk to the boys; Tourist Day everyone came dressed in crazy outfits of shorts and T-shirts; Mafia day, the cheerleaders dressed in trench coats, along with others, taking on the new profession as hitmen; and last but not least was Original Blue and White Day. All the students participated.

Who are these ridiculous characters? George Long and Eric McGill truly enjoy dressing in costumes.

In disguise, Rodney Murdaugh is a gangster for the day. Look out, he may have a gun!

Most of the hard work was overlooked by the students. The Varsity Cheerleaders did an excellent job in planning and organizing. The buttons for Hush-Button Day, the posters in the halls, the balloons at the ball game, and the great pep rally were all contributed by the cheerleaders.

Mrs. Smoak, Junior Class sponsor, gives instructions to the juniors on how to decorate for the homecoming dance.

And here she, ladies and gentlemen. The 1986 Homecoming Queen, Miss Melody McGinnis.

Melody McGinnis receives a hug from former queen Kristi Connelly as her father waits for his hug.

Melody McGinnis, Traci Warren, and Joy Buntun are the contestants for the '86 Homecoming Queen. The students will have a hard time deciding on one.

HOMECOMING '86

It was the last but most important day of spirit week. Everyone; faculty, students, parents, and alumni, awaited the very special night of Homecoming '86.

At 7:00, an hour before the game, the stands were already filled with loyal fans ready to support their winning team to a victory against Country Day. The senior football players and their sponsors made their traditional walk across the football field as they were introduced to family, friends, and visitors.

The moment had come. The moment to find out who was to be the Homecoming Queen of 1986. Joy Bunton, Melody McGinnis, and Traci Warren, the candidates for the Senior Class, climbed nervously into the convertible for their long ride around the football field. Each candidate was escorted by her father to the center of the field. There, reigning queen Kristi Connelly crowned Melody McGinnis as the new queen.

After the Warhawks defeated Country Day, 19-41, the Junior Class sponsored a Homecoming dance to celebrate their victory. Music was provided by the juniors' own Matt Hiott and refreshments, prepared by the Juniors, were served to all who came. The night was finally over, but the memories lasted forever.

After escorting the football players on to the field, the sponsors awaited halftime of the game. Then they participated in the crowning of the new Homecoming Queen. Chosen by the senior football players, these sponsors played an important role in Homecoming '86.

Renee Dennis awaits the time to go out on the field and support our old and new Homecoming queens.

Miss Kristi Connelly returns to give up her crown. Kristi was escorted by Mr. Charles Griffith, a member of the Board.

WHO WON?!!! This was the phrase used most by everyone. From one end of the school to the other. The words could be heard.

Girl against Girl ... Guy against Guy ... Class against Class ...

The 1986 Field Day was kicked off by a parade of the classes. Each class carried a banner they had made.

Field Day proved to be fun for everyone. Students participated in races and played softball and volleyball. Ribbons were given in all events.

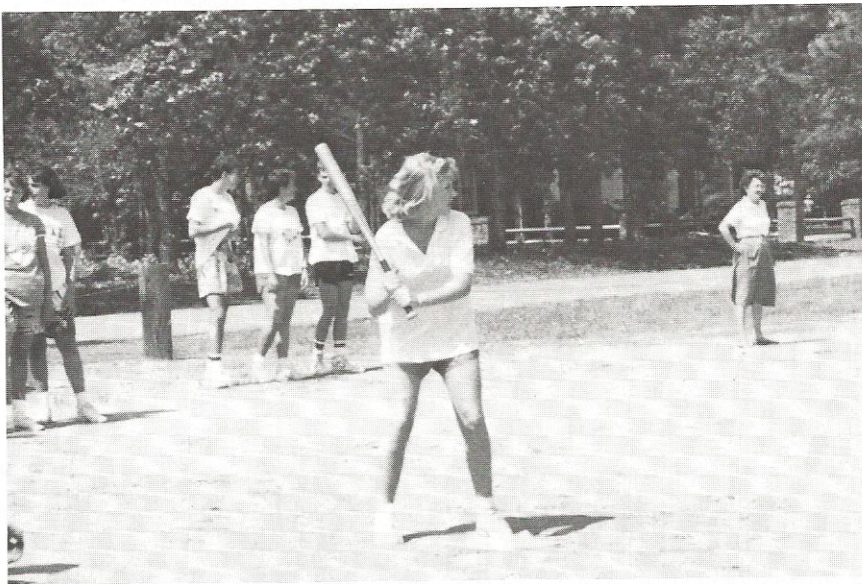

The judges and umpires were the teachers. ALL CALLS WERE FINAL!!!

JR-SR '86

After the great dance that the Juniors had done for the Seniors, they had to get up at the crack of dawn to clean up the gym. After the gym was clean all of the Juniors and the Seniors had to sign a sheet so they would not have to come back to school on Monday.

PLEASE MOM, NO MORE PICTURES

It was a special night . . . It was Friday . . . It was prom night! What lasted only one brief moment in time required a whole year of preparation. When school started last September, so did the money-raising. The Juniors sold everything from doughnuts to magazines to make Jr.-Sr. happen. This covered the cost of the band and decorations.

The theme, "A Night in Paradise," was well matched by the decorations. Bamboo walls, coconuts, pineapples, and palm trees showed the appearance of a beautiful tropical island. The Toyz, the band chosen by the Juniors, filled the gym with beach music. The drop-in was held at Scott Moody's house where drinks and refreshments were served. Each couple had their picture made by Bill Bone.

Remembering this night, one year ago, the Senior Class realized how much preparation it took for the Juniors to make the Jr.-Sr. Prom a very special night for the Class of 1986. Each rising Senior respects all the hard work time the Junior spend on planning a night to remember for all students that go. It may take only two weeks to put a prom together, but it takes months to decide on a theme and decorations. Much deserved credit went to Mrs. Smoak, the Junior Class sponsor, for all her patience in the class.

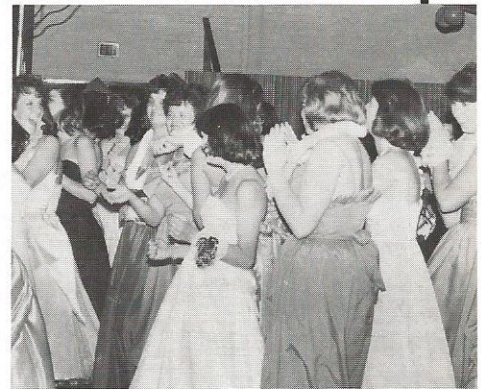

When the six sophomore ushers were asked the question, "What was special about being an usher at the prom this year?" they had many interesting replies.

"Seeing all the 'Purty' girls in their 'Purty' new dresses", "Getting to go one year earlier and wearing those funny hats!", "The beginning of the end", "Getting to go to the prom without having to decorate was great!", "Looking forward to going to the beach after a short but good night's sleep."

Matt Hiott and Heather Gahagan dance the night away. This was special, for Matt finally got to dance with his date.

This dance is for the girls only, while their dates rest their tired feet.

---

This is no doubt the dance where you "bop till you drop."

---

The Toyz was chosen by the Juniors to play for the prom. Everyone loved them and the music.

---

The ushere anxiously await their first prom.

From Basic To Advanced

Learning to program a computer is helpful in step-by-step progressive thinking. Both Mr. McArthur and Mr. Maddox required their students to write their own programs. The students also created games which made learning more enjoyable. Mr. Maddox said he feels that without any question, the students will need the ability to incorporate computer science into their future lives. Mr. McArthur said, "Algebra helps you organize information and it develops analytical problem solving." There are many everyday uses of algebra which many students fail to realize.

Mrs. Goehring said, "My objective in psychology is to help students to understand themselves better and to understand others better." The seniors who took psychology studied the emphasis of physical influences on emotions and behavior.

Another subject the seniors took was Advanced Science. One of the things they did in this class was dissected different animals and did a comparative anatomy.

Is this the latest fashion? No, but Mrs. Linder and Mrs. Smoak have no objection to "modeling" their slings.

In computer science class, Terry Jones and Stephen Padgett learn how to write basic programs.

Jo Ann Liles — 8th and 9th grade English

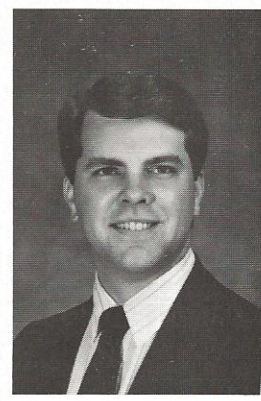

Betty Linder — 10th grade English, Typing, 12th grade English and Composition

Jane Litchfield — Assistant Bookkeeper

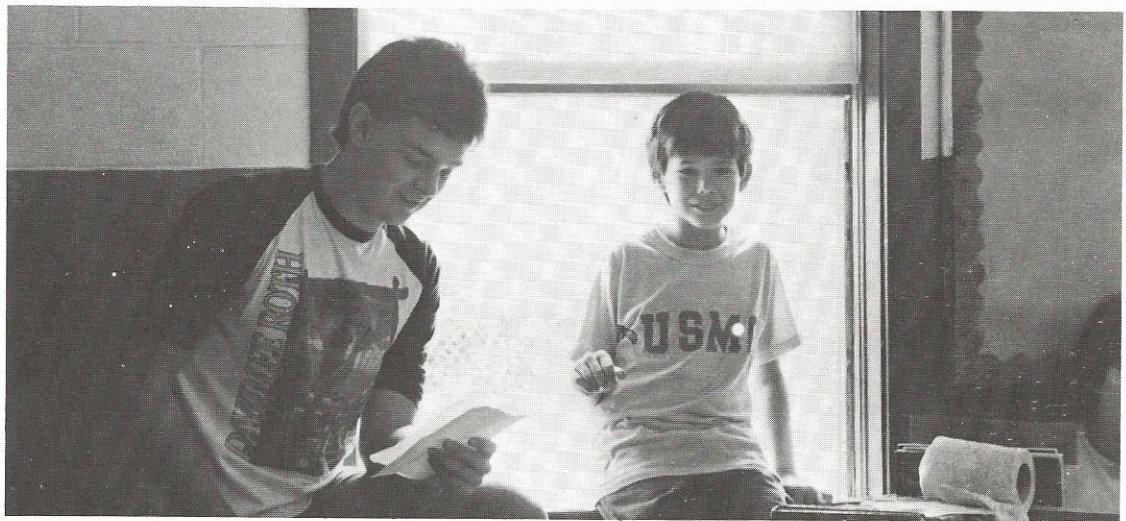

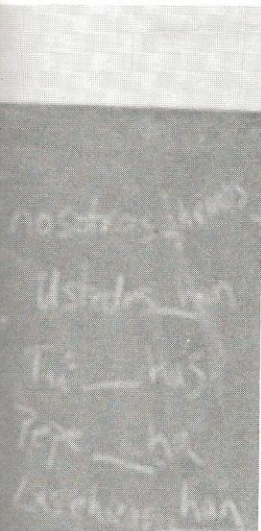

Brett Maddox — 6th-8th grade Computer Science, 6th and 7th grade math, Pre-Algebra, Algebra II, Algebra III

Suzanne Martin — 3rd grade

Chad Brightwell, one of the Spanish III students, teaches Spanish to the 4th and 5th graders.

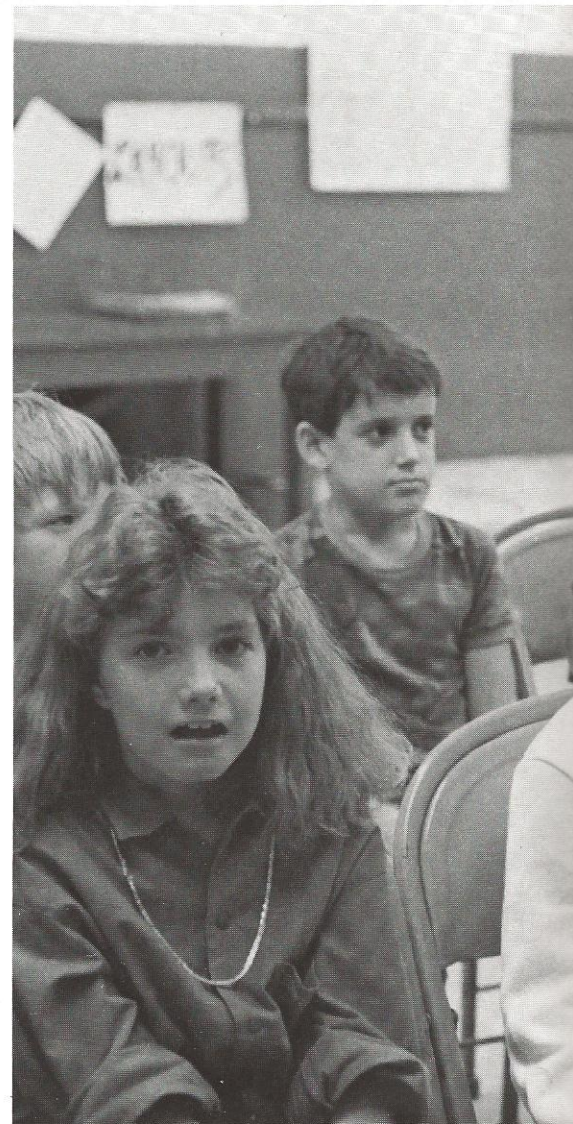

Mrs. Linder explains the fundamentals of typing to the Juniors.

At P.E., Shane Walker, Tim Godwin, and Toby Silber take a minute to catch their breath before they have to do more exercises.

Before the bell rings, Kelly Ferguson and Cindy Smith lead the class in one last song.

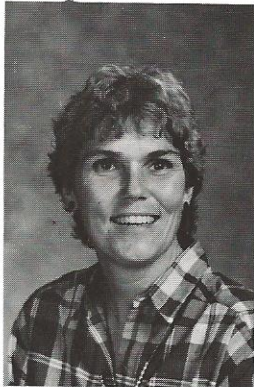

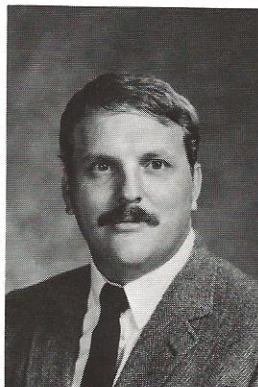

David McArthur — Algebra I, Algebra II, 11th and 12th grade Computer Science

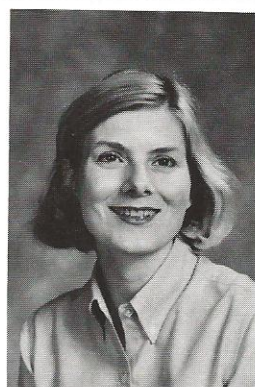

Carol Meegan — 9th grade English, K-9th grade P.E.

Tony Orsini — Geometry, Pre-Calculus

Enjoyable Experiences

Storytime for kindergarten, 1st, and 2nd grades was held by Mrs. Hiers. The 3rd, 4th, and 5th grade had a library class each week which was conducted by Mrs. Brightwell. Both Mrs. Hiers and Mrs. Brightwell introduced the students to quality literature while at the same time made it an enjoyable experience.

Mrs. Brightwell said, "Books are the windows through which the soul looks out."

The ability to seek information from books will help you throughout your life.

Cindy Smith and Kelly Ferguson devoted their study hall to directing music classes on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of each week. Besides singing, the classes learned about musical notes and scales. They also had a Christmas and Spring Program.

The P.E. classes did exercises and learned about a variety of sports. Near the end of the year, the classes were given a fitness test and Field Day was held for grades K-12.

These 3rd graders could be our future musicians. They always look forward to their music class on Monday.

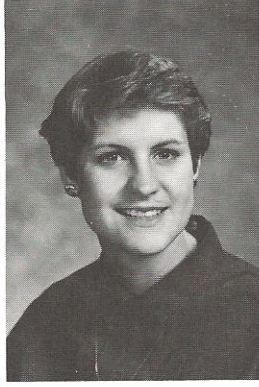

Carey Speaks — 6th and 7th grade English, 6th grade Reading, 7th and 8th grade Literature

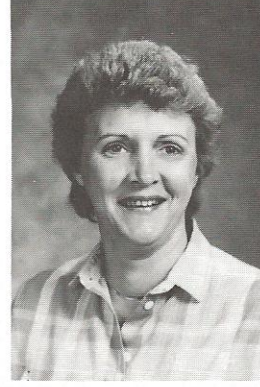

Laura Spears — 4th grade

Beth Warren — 5th grade

Sylvia Warren — Kindergarten

Joann Wimberly — Guidance Counselor, 6th and 7th grade Science

A New Type Of Typing

At the beginning of the year, the Juniors anxiously awaited the arrival of the new XEROX Memorywriters. When they finally arrived, the Juniors crowded around Mrs. Linder as she revealed to them a few of the many computerized functions that could be performed on the new typewriters. One of the functions that she showed them was erasing. Everyone was disappointed when she removed the eraser disc, but it was later returned.

When asked how the new typewriters affected his feelings toward typing, Eric McGill replied, "It makes me feel more technologically advanced and also believe that I am involved in the computerized revolution."

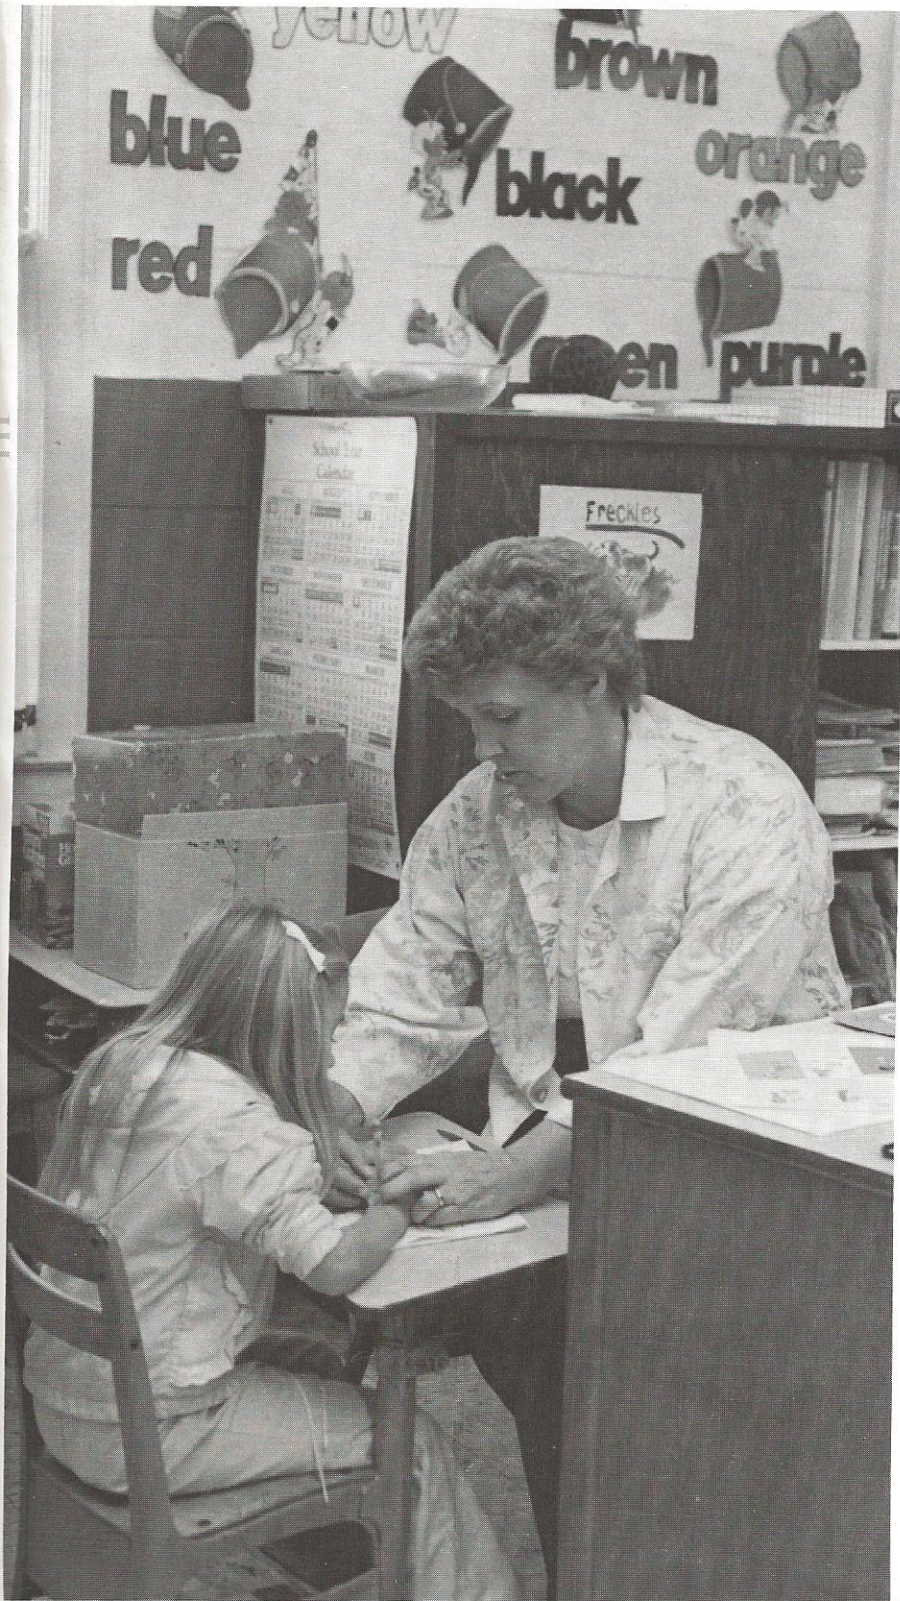

Mrs. Linder introduced the class to the keyboard and also to the many different techniques such as horizontal and vertical centering. After they learned about the machines they were using, the Juniors worked at their own pace to learn the keyboard. When this was accomplished, they learned the proper way to type research papers, book reports, memorandums, etc.

Chad Brightwell, Allen Gustin, and Toby Hinton practice horizontal and vertical centering.

Dedicated To The One We Love

Always at their side, Mrs. Warren loads the children on the fire truck.

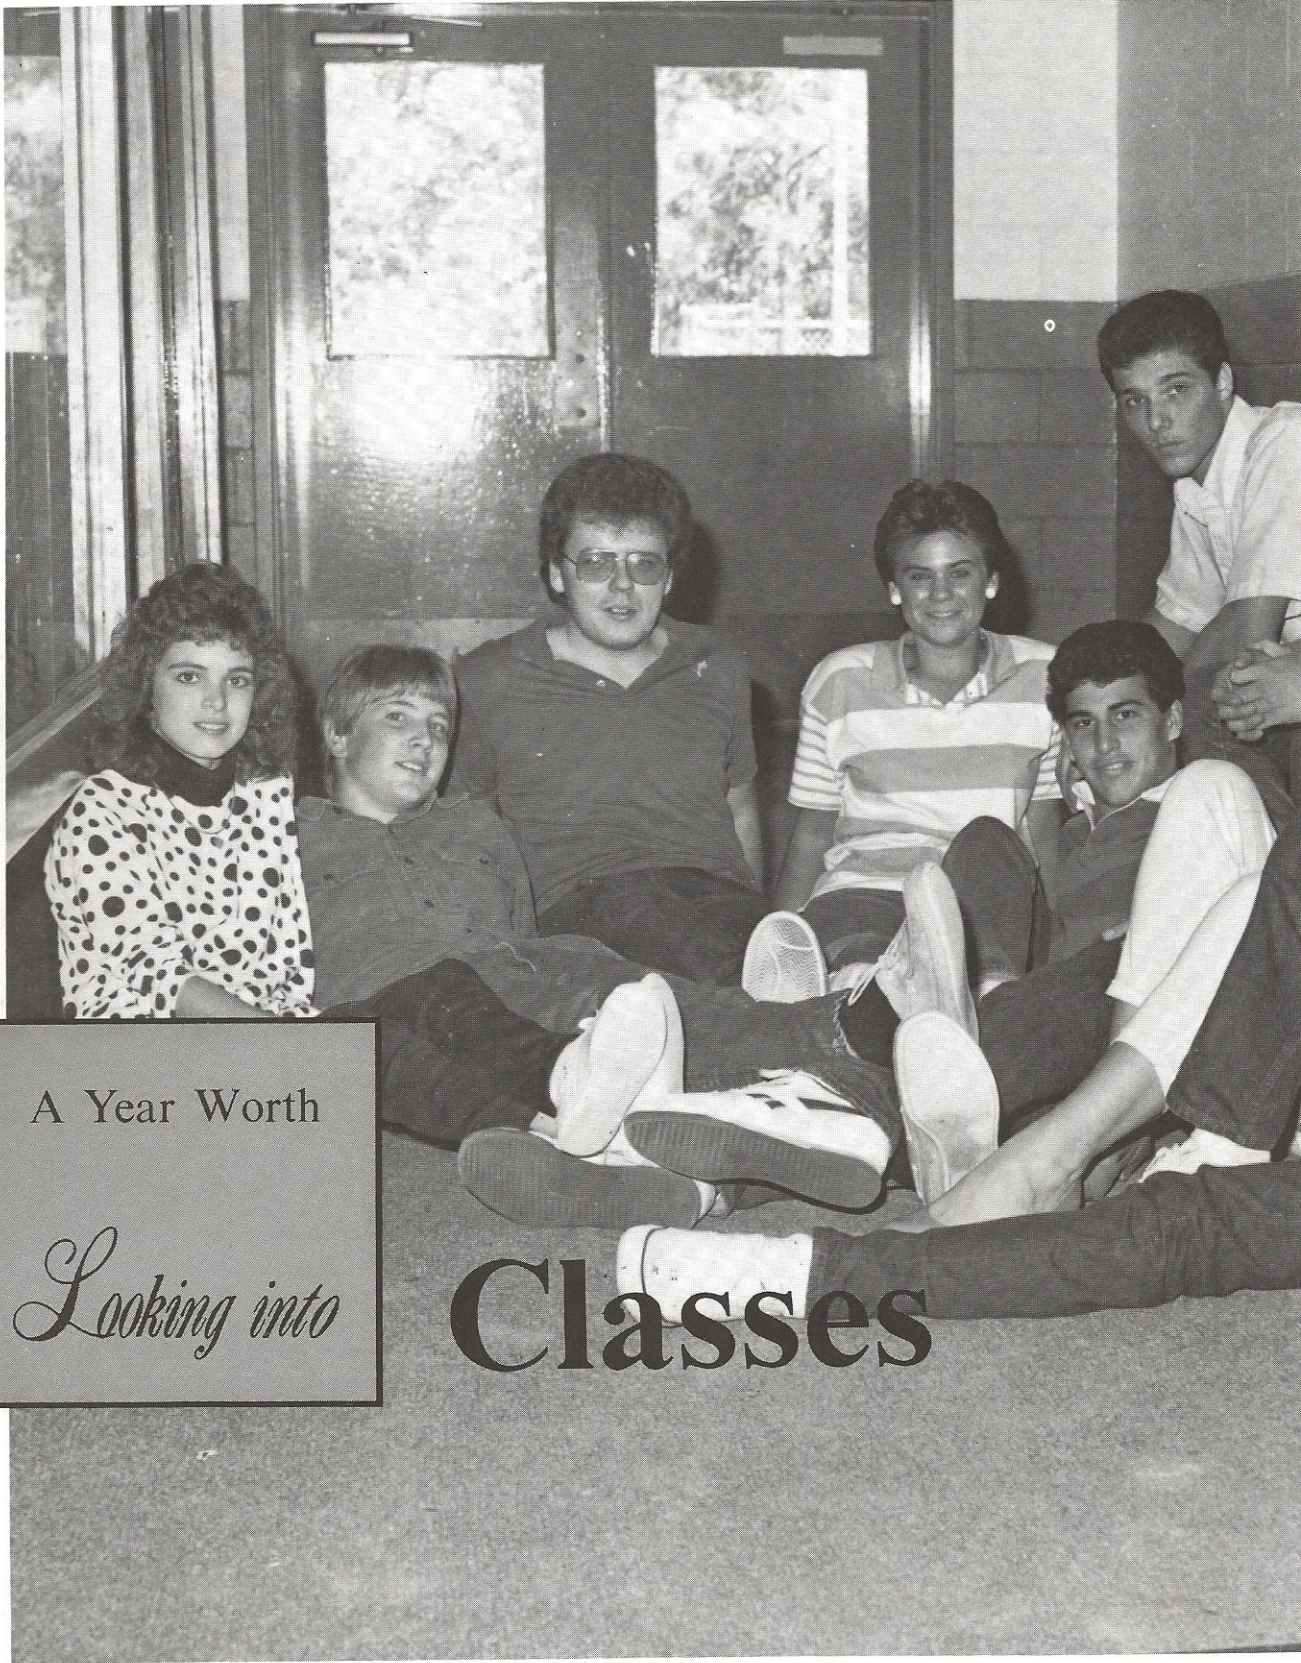

It doesn't really matter how long a person works at something, as long as they do their best, their accomplishments will be recognized. Mrs. Sylvia Warren has been teaching at John. C. for fourteen years, but she hasn't gone unnoticed. Everyday she has shown her love, loyalty, and understanding to students and faculty. Her warm friendly smile has made lasting impressions in our hearts.

How she would comfort us when our parents left us crying on the first day of school, how she would threaten to wash our mouths out with soap when we were bad, how she would button up our coats when the weather was cold: these are just a few special memories we share.

Mrs. Warren taught us more than just the alphabet and numbers, she taught us how to love and be kind to others. When asked why she enjoyed teaching kindergarten, she replied, "Watching them grow from "babies" into more independent boys and girls is rewarding." This year we reward Mrs. Sylvia Warren by dedicating to her the 1987 Talon.

It's hard to believe students now taking chemistry and algebra had trouble with the alphabet. What would we do without Mrs. Warren?

Together Through It All

The Class of '87 has been through a lot together. They have seen new faces join them, and others wave goodbye. They have had their ups and downs, their "killer" tests and impossible teachers, great victories and heart-breaking losses on the field on Friday nights, but they have always had each other. Whether they needed advice, help with homework, or a sympathetic hug, these seniors could always find a classmate to support them.

This sense of helping one another and caring about each other was what made their seniors more than twenty-six individuals. Together they were one unit: the Class of '87.

Stick 'em up! Gene Simmons, Brian Strickland, and Henry Mills appear to be staging a hold-up at the gift shop.

Pausing for a group shot at Charlestowne Landing, these seniors show what great friends they have all become.

A Future

"Being a senior means an end to a very big part of my life. It means relief and sorrow — losing touch with friends, yet finding new ones."
 — Brian Strickland

Michelle Hughes and Sean Knight recall the childhood pleasure of playing on the see-saw during recess.

Marc Warren and Thomas Rowe are eager to set up housekeeping in their cottage in the woods. Learning about Charleston's history proved to be much more fun than classes ... but what isn't?

In addition to the work required of a senior, Madison Farrell, Marc Warren, Melody McGinnis, and Scott Moody take on the responsibility of being class officers for 1986-87.

Worth Looking Forward To

When they first walked down the hall as freshmen, the students of the Class of '87 had no idea that four years at high school would go by so quickly, nor did they realize how much fun they would experience as students at JCCA. As seniors at last, the Class of '87 began to look back upon the last few years of their lives to realize with a sense of sadness that they soon would have to say goodbye to high school football games, basketball games, pep rallies, and dances. They knew that it was time to accomplish the goals that were set so long ago.

As the end of the year approached, many students began wondering what the following year would bring. Feelings of excitement, anticipation, pride, and sadness filled their minds. There was no going back now; high school was almost over and the future lay ahead. Graduation would mark the end of high school years and the beginning of life as an adult; dreams and goals would be fulfilled. After graduation, seniors go their separate ways, but experiencing JCCA would enable them to get the most out of life.

Faces Going Places

An enjoyable part of these seniors' day off to go to Charleston was their sight-seeing tour aboard the tram.

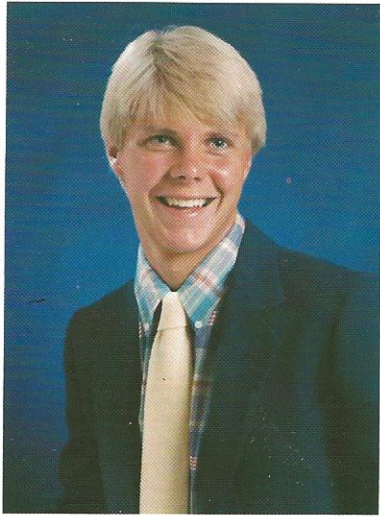

What are friends for but when you need a little boost every now and then? John Hamilton stands tall with the help of Marc Warren, Chris Hulsey, and Thomas Rowe.

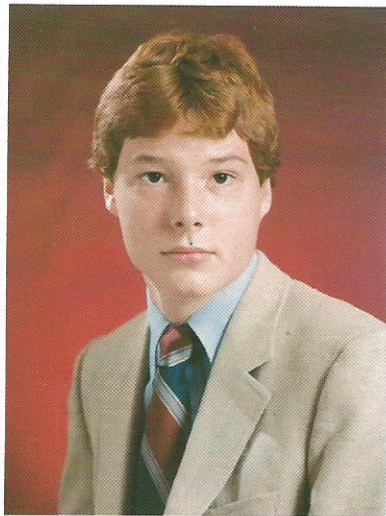

What a line-up! These senior girls show that the Class of '87 has beauty as well as brains.

That Was Then . . .

That was then — our faces were a little bit different, our daily lives a little more simple. The styles changed with the rest of the world, and so did we. Some of our needs became different and our became are more in focus. We have lived a little and learned a lot through our classes, our experiences, and each other. But inside we remained the same curious children we were then, full of a thirst for knowledge and dreams for the future. Our added years of high school have left us more mature and responsible, without taking away our youth.

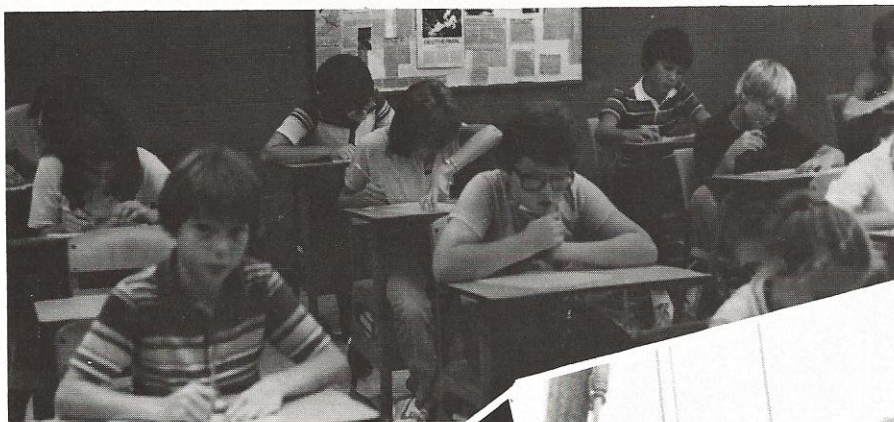

Remembering times past — that momentous first day of school, orientation every year and seeing how your friends have changed, football seasons, crazy pep rallies, and memorable Jr-Sr dances with an even more unforgettable weekend at the beach. Some memories are “so close and yet so far” — almost tangible they’re so real, but never to be captured again unless in the fleeting second you smell fire and once again are raising spirit at a bonfire, or any other sense that reminds you of times gone by. These memories, these friends may be left behind that Graduation Day, but instead of being gone, they are treasured forever as memories to last an eternity — the greatest years of our lives.

A TIME OF TRIUMPH

*A time of triumph, and of pain
Time to lose and yet to gain
Ties we bonded tight together
Just to break in stormy weather
Hopes and dreams we dared to share
With anyone who seemed to care
A time to laugh, and to cry
To greet the new and say goodbye
A time of triumph shared together
Memories will last forever.*

Mr. And Mrs. Warhawk

Robbie Hogan and Melody McGinnis were awarded the honor of being chosen the most distinguished senior superlative. Each year the faculty vote on which two seniors of the class represent the school values and characteristics. Responsibility, dependability, and student involvement were a few of the characteristics the faculty considered. As for Melody's involvement in school, she was editor-in-chief of the Talon for two years, a cheerleader for four years, and a member of the War Hawk staff, NHS, JETS, and French club. Robbie was a member of the Academic Team, Winthrop Challenge Team, War Hawk staff, NHS, Student Council, and French club. Both of these students well deserved the honor of being Mr. and Mrs. War Hawk.

Most School Spirited

Brian Strickland and Debbie Powers certainly portrayed the most school spirit. When not participating in baseball, basketball, and football, Brian encouraged his teammates to victory. Debbie was also involved in sports such as basketball and softball. In her spare time she cheered for her winning team as a Varsity cheerleader.

Most Versatile

Scott Moody and Melody McGinnis were chosen by the senior class for this superlative due to their outstanding ability to excel in sports, academics, and activities. Each was able to handle the responsibility of school organizations and still maintain a high grade point average.

Most Dependable

If there was a job to be done or a deadline to be met, Robbie Hogan and Johnnie Neal would be the ones to choose. Being extremely responsible students, they could always be depended on in stressing times. They proved to be natural leaders in the classroom as well as in organizations.

Wittiest

Gene Simmons and Michelle Hughes were elected as wittiest. When in time of stress and depression these two students could always bring a smile to someone's face. If not by their outrageous sense of humor, they used their crazy spontaneous actions to bring laughter to the school.

Miss DAR

The Daughters of the American Revolution awarded Johnnie Neal the honor of being Miss DAR. She received the award for her concern for people, friendly character, and loyalty as a citizen.

Most Congenial

Scott Moody and Karen Nettles were chosen by seniors as most congenial. Their bubbling personality touched the hearts of everyone in the class. Whenever a student needed someone to turn to, Scott and Karen were there to help. Their cheerful smiles and friendly actions displayed the concern they felt for others.

Most Athletic

Brian Strickland and Debbie Powers were chosen this superlative on the basis of their ability and willingness to participate in many athletic sports at school. Debbie played softball, basketball and powderpuff. She was also a varsity cheerleader. Brian played football, basketball, and baseball all four years of high school.

Juniors — So Close And Yet So Far

“What do you wanna do with your life?” — (Twisted Sister). For the Class of '88 this year was a time for serious inner reflection. They spent many hours thinking about what they were going to do with their lives. The questions “What do I want to be when I grow up?” and “Where am I going to school after graduation?” plagued the minds of these almost-seniors. In their classes and their personal lives, they developed decision-making abilities to answer their many questions. Having their licenses, the juniors experienced more freedom than they had had in the past. The added responsibility strengthened the maturity of these students, preparing them for their senior year — their time to “rule the school”.

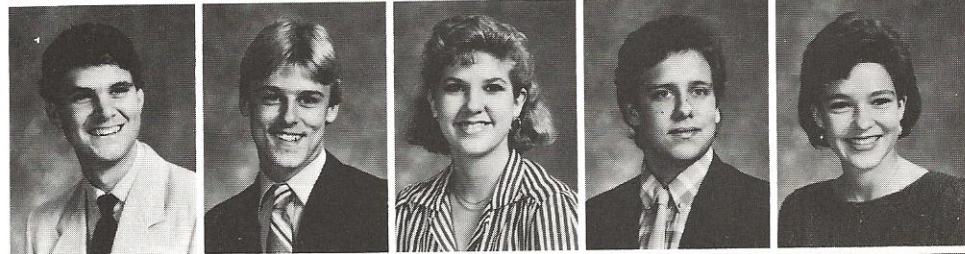

Class rings, letter jackets, taking the PSAT's and SAT's, playing varsity sports, attending the prom, and being a member of the very elite group — “the Upperclassmen” — all contributed to a very busy year. The Class of '88 found that being a junior had many advantages that underclassmen can't enjoy. However, life as a junior wasn't all fun and games. With college lying ahead, many of these students began to take studying more seriously, hoping to have better chances with their favorite colleges. It didn't seem as if it had been that long ago when they were freshmen; now they were almost seniors. The old cliché about “How time flies when you're having fun” could have been written with the juniors in mind.

Who ever said the juniors weren't TOUGH? Stephen Padgett, Chad Brightwell, and Will Bryan show us what “real men” we have in the Class of '88.

Caught In The Middle

“Middle of the road” best described the sophomores. They were not yet distinguished upperclassmen and they no longer shared in the spotlight of attention that the freshmen enjoyed. The sophomores were just “there”. They were only extra faces in the halls, more voices at pep rallies. Although they faded into the background of halls, lockers, and classes, sophomores made their mark on John C. It was a difficult year, but they had better things ahead to think about.

The newness and initial excitement of high school had long worn off and these students used their experience from a year of the “freshmen struggles” to get their lives organized. The Class of 1989 learned to budget their time, becoming more active members in clubs and organizations. Even with their increased extra-curricular activities, the sophomores still achieved high grades, perhaps even with a little less study time.

A sophomore's work is never done! This is true especially for the class officers: Kevin Beach, J.J. Evans, Christy Steele, and Emily Warren.

Freshmen Adjusting To Change

The change of going into the high school age group has caused many adjustments in the daily routine of ninth graders. This year they got their first taste of new and more difficult subjects including chemistry, physics, geometry, and foreign language. Many students enjoyed being involved with school activities, such as sports, cheerleading, student council, Spanish club, and the annual staff. The freshmen accepted the new demands on their time, and even found themselves enjoying all the hard work and excitement. High school, with its many drawbacks, was found to be worth the extra time and effort.

Eighth Grade Trends

Courses such as geography, algebra, English, literature, and earth science kept the eighth graders very busy. The students also enjoyed working with computers, and were able to vent some energy every day during P.E. Like most active thirteen year olds, these students loved playing sports. Many were involved in football, basketball, baseball, and cheerleading. What were their favorite activities outside of school? Shopping, watching TV, and eating pizza were popular favorites.

MOVING UP

The seventh grade was definitely a year of moving up for these students. Everything seemed to be just a little tougher — the teachers, the courses, the homework, and the sports. Many students started playing J.V. sports for the first time — football, basketball, and cheerleading. Others enjoyed the limelight from being the oldest on the B-team league.

For the first time, these students experienced the conflict everyone eventually feels when trying to budget his time to fit everything in. Friendships and relationships were still hard to get used to when you're twelve, and these students were no exception.

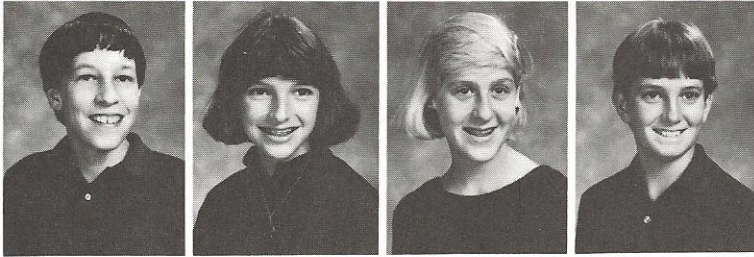

The year proved very busy, very full, and very fun for the future Class of '93.

This work's a piece of cake! These students aren't phased a bit by the increase in homework they find in the seventh grade.

A Sixth Grader's Viewpoint

Math was "boring" and in history they "did nothing". So what did these sixth graders do this year? Todd Meegan liked to "pass notes and talk", while Felicia Fagnoli preferred lunch. All students enjoyed P.E. — soccer being Rande Ritter's favorite sport.

Mold, diseases, and cells were science class topics of conversation. Spanish parties were very popular, especially because of the pinata. As they struggled with fractions and world history, the sixth graders looked forward to their ski trip to Wolf Laurel.

These wild sixth graders love to clown around — and they think Mrs. Speaks is "just one of the gang".

Daniel DuPre and Wade Marvin think English and literature are worth smiling about.

What's one of the best things about school? FRIENDS, of course!

A CLASS WITH HEART

The smaller the class, the bigger the heart! This phrase perfectly described the fifth grade, who had only 16 students. Did the small size seem to bother them? "No, it makes us closer," said one fifth grader when asked this question. When the students weren't busy with homework, they were planning their Christmas project. Instead of drawing names and giving gifts, they gave food to the SPCA. This goes to prove just what a big heart a small class can have!

LOVIN' EVERY MINUTE OF IT

How do you keep school fun and interesting? These fourth graders found plenty of ways, with the help of their teacher, Miss Spears. Projects such as building volcanoes and colonies helped keep learning fun as well as educational.

Among other interesting projects the fourth graders tried were making their own commercials and making an authentic country store. To contribute to their studies of health and science, they had a nutrition course taught by Miss Spears' sister. Every Wednesday, they had fun dressing up. Smarter than average nine-year olds, they did fifth grade level social studies. As Miss Spears expressed it, "Because they are as bright as they are, we have done many projects that other fourth grade classes couldn't do." And they loved every minute of it!

There's something mischievous behind these innocent smiles! Donald Orsini and Marisa Dopson are plotting new ways to beat the boredom of school.

FRIENDS WORTH HOLDING ON

The third grade was enthusiastic about everything in school. They loved their new reading books and doing “rock projects” for science. Their favorite subject was South Carolina history — a unanimous favorite because it was “fun.”

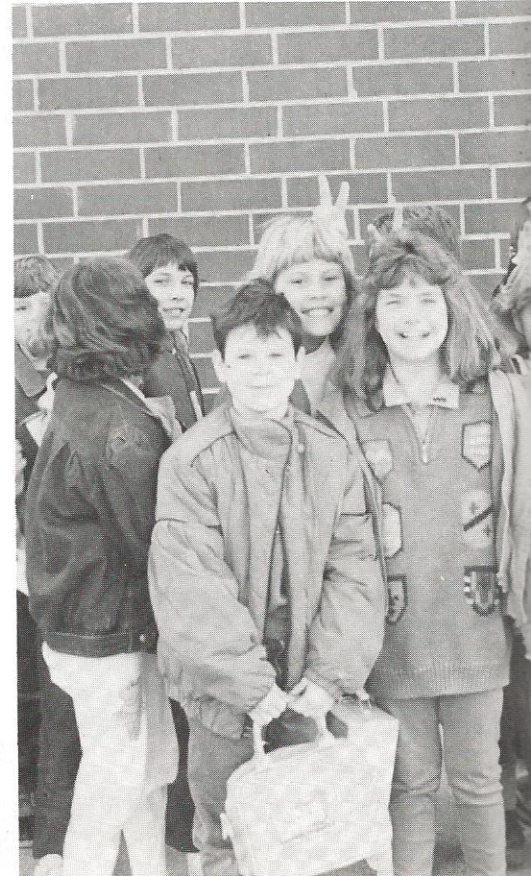

School wasn't all studying, though. These third graders got a real “kick” out of playing soccer in P.E. Relay races were another way they got rid of excess energy. Another favorite part of the day was music class. Kaci Nelson's especially liked the song, “Hole in the Ground.” What did these third graders like most about school? Recess and pep rallies!

Industrious as ever, these third graders get to work on their assignments for South Carolina history.

Every penny counts — when it comes to lunch money! Danielle Dantzer keeps it all straight as she makes her order.

EXCITEMENT OF LEARNING

"I like second grade because you learn how to spell words." Mikey Crosby shared this sentiment with his classmates. Social studies and math were other favorites of the second grade students. The highlight of the year was a field trip to see "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow." Seeing this show right before Halloween was a scary experience, as well as fun.

These second graders were industrious too, making a social studies mural to illustrate the things they had learned about communities and neighborhoods. For Christmas, the students made decorations for their Christmas tree, like bells and stars. After all this activity, many second graders still found time for Cub Scouts and Brownies. As Angel Johnson expressed it, "What I like most about school? Going home!"

FRIENDS — Just one of the special things about the second grade. Charlie McLaughlin, Brandon Hill, and Bill Richardson take advantage of recess time to pal around together.

These second graders are fascinated with their music lesson. They especially enjoy singing Christmas carols.

What A Challenge!

Mrs. Richardson's first grade class — what a challenge — what a job! These 26 rambunctious (with some exceptions) six year olds started the year with a bang and made a name for themselves early in the year. Excessive talking, karate, and playground antics kept Mrs. Richardson hopping in September; but then, with second semester approaching, there was a change in the air. These little people were all behaving (most of the time) and a whole new world had opened for them — the world of books. They were reading like champs and spelling words that would make a 5th grader shudder.

They loved P.E., music, PIZZA, and of course, recess! At the beginning of the year, they attended a play in Charleston and made Mrs. Richardson proud by behaving like angels.

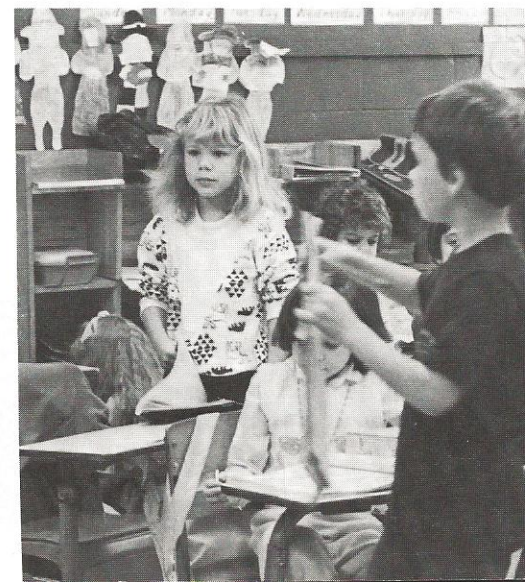

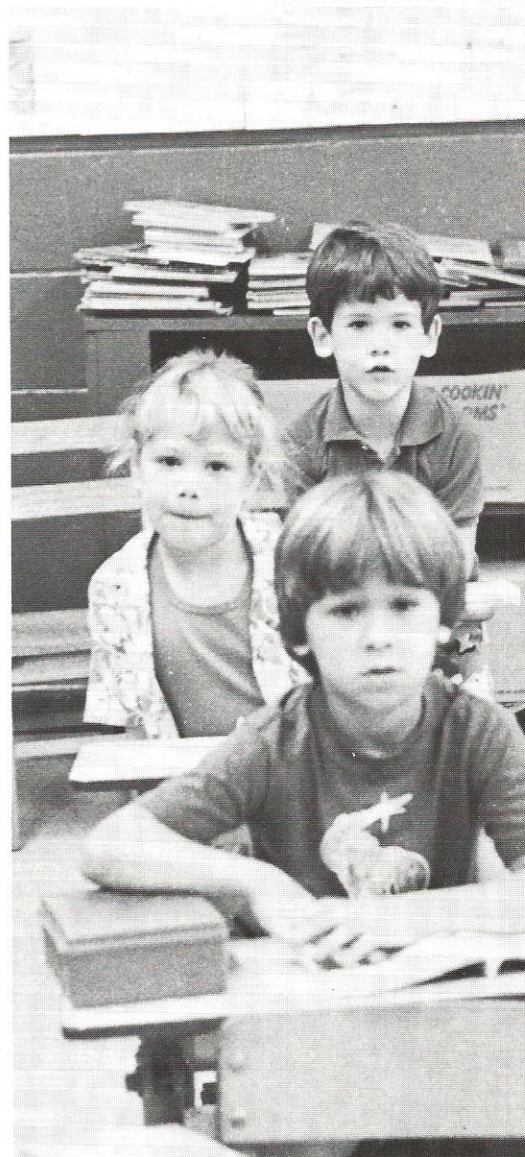

Staying in school until 2:15 was a real adjustment for these 1st graders, such a big step up from kindergarten. Even minor changes in routine could be major obstacles for 6 year olds but learning to change was part of growing up and that, with their teacher's guidance, was what these students seemed to be doing so well.

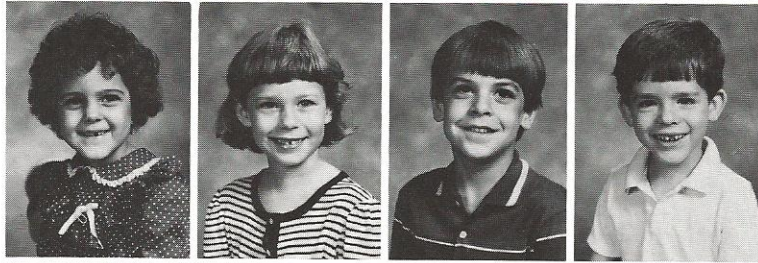

These rambunctious first graders think that all work and no play make life dull.

Tony Fargnoli, Kelly Smith, and Michael Wood don't like being interrupted from their work!

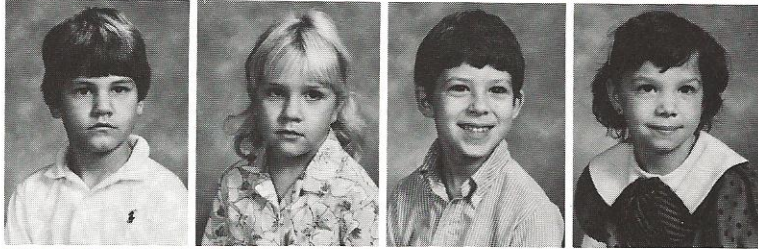

There's always something going on in the first grade classroom, whether it's spelling or making decorations.

DISCOVERING THE WORLD

Kindergarten: Webster calls it a class for young children that develops basic skills and social behavior by games, toys, simple handicraft, etc. It is this and so much more. Kindergarten, for some children, was the first taste of the world. Until then, their lives had revolved around their homes, parents, brothers or sisters, and their own wants and needs. Kindergarten introduced these children to the concepts of sharing and thinking for themselves.

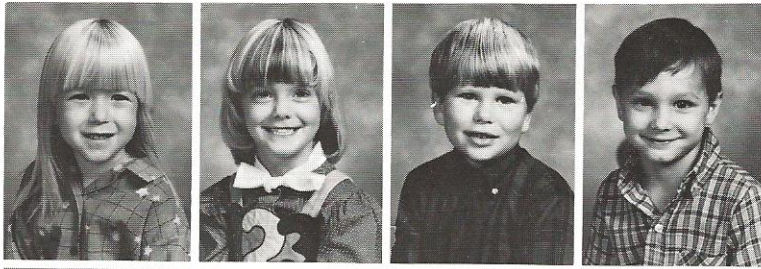

Games and educational toys helped to teach the young students basic recognizing skills. They focused on one color each week until they had mastered a whole palette. The alphabet and shapes of squares and circles were also studied by the eager young minds.

Kindergarten, so many things in so many important ways, taught these students more than just tangible information to start off their education. This year served to open their minds and show them the wonder of discovering the world.

Farewell,

With tears and cheers the Class of '86 left the gym, as students for the last time. Caps were thrown into the air and memories flooded their eyes as the new graduates exchanged hugs with friends and family.

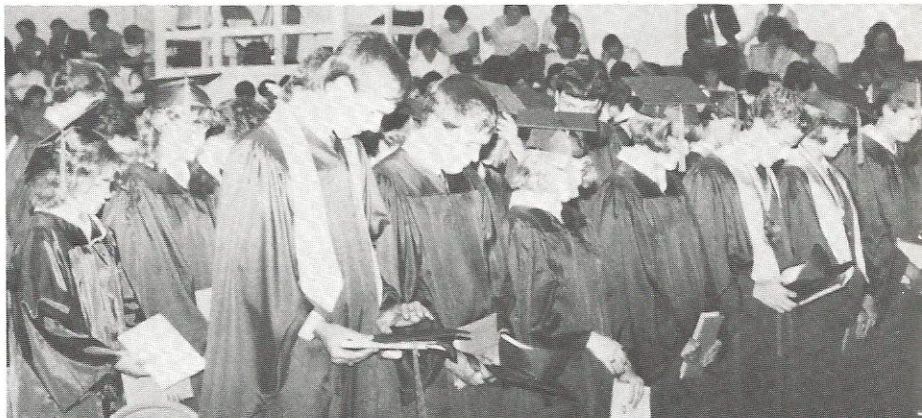

These students' years at the Academy had changed as well. As always, graduation held the excitement and expectations of another class of young people who had "grown up already." This was a night to remember all those precious times, special friends, and years of trials and triumphs. Whether their thoughts were of sentimental memories or the party later that night, each student knew that soon all these things, so important at the time, would fade into memory.

There comes a time for moving on and unfortunately, high school can't last forever. The best of luck to all of the Class of '86, and may they remain as happy as they were the night of Friday, May 30, when they left their childhood behind.

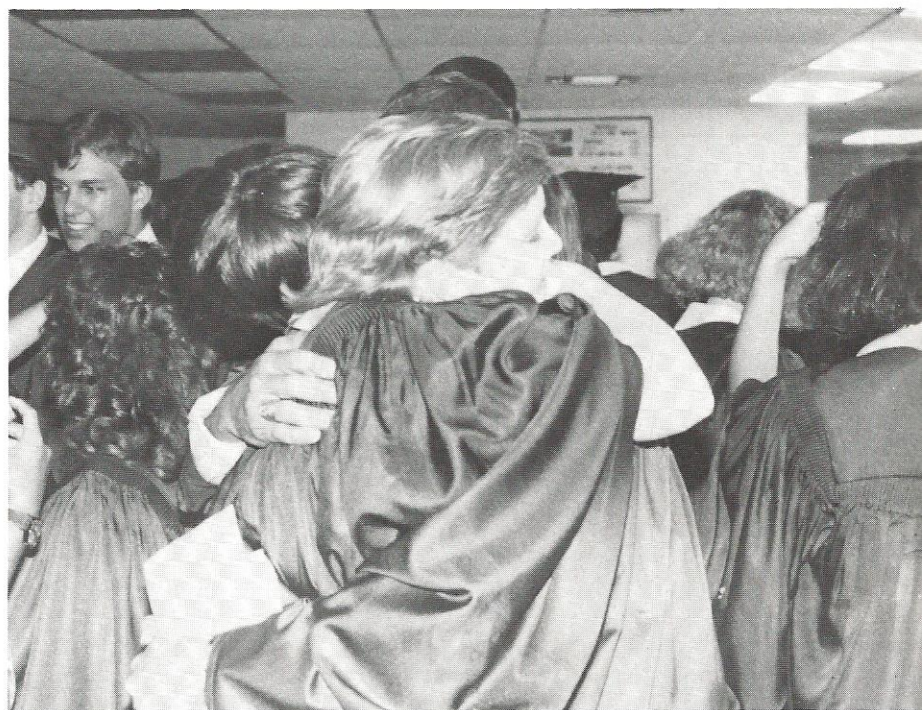

As the Benediction is performed, the graduating class gives thanks for surviving high school.

As they say farewell to their friends, Caroline Werntz and her fellow graduates exchange congratulations and promises to keep in touch.

Henry Hiott and Lisa Hudson express their feelings of joy and sadness.

But Not Goodbye

Hard work does pay off! Valedictorian Cindy Kinard and Salutatorian Kip Hooker wait anxiously for the ceremonies to begin.

Ready For The World

Kindergarten graduation — what an important time! Young minds, fresh faces, just ready to conquer the world. After a year of addition and the alphabet, these students were ready to move on to bigger and better things — like reading! The shy five year olds had turned into more responsible young people. They had learned about sharing and making friends, respecting and listening to authority — lessons all of us can learn from.

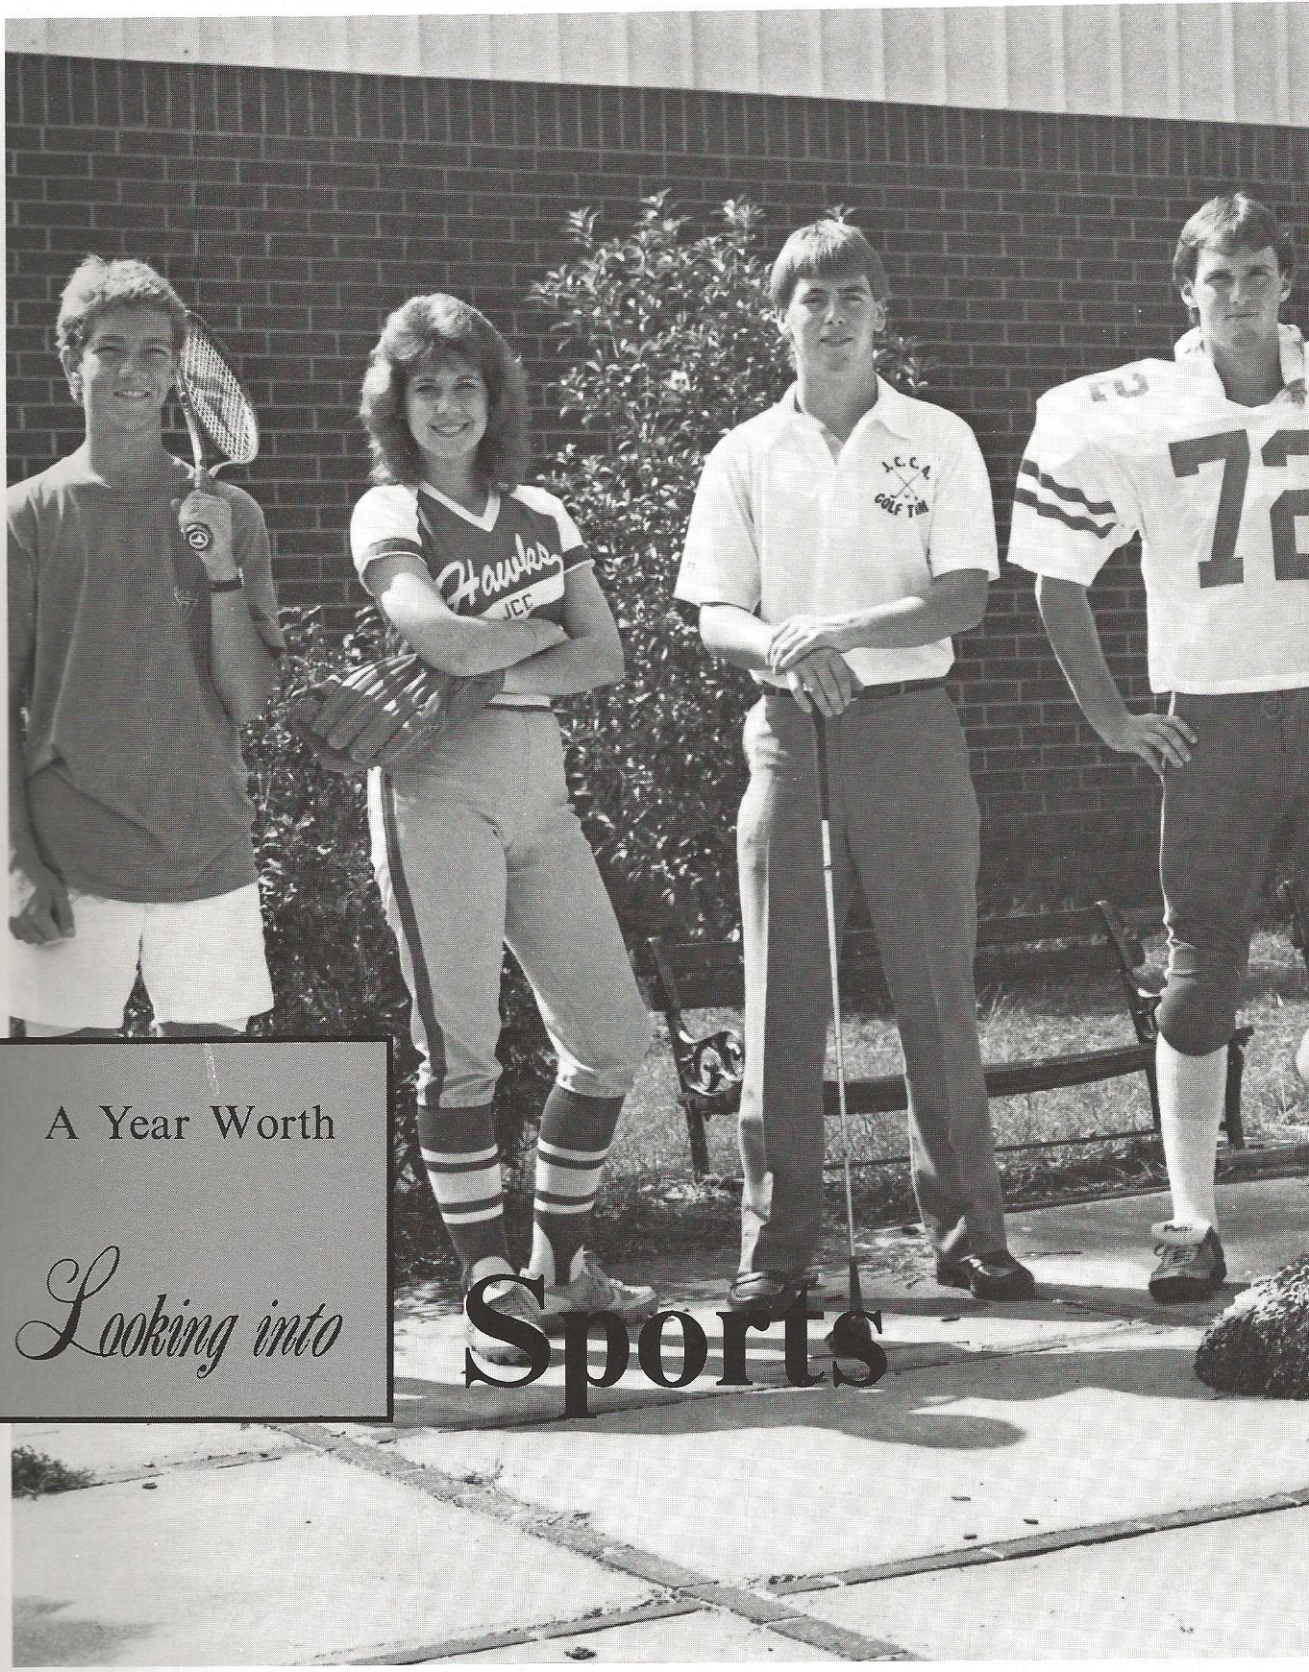

As the kindergarten teacher breathed a sigh of relief, thirty-six young hopefuls were unleashed — ready for the world!

Kelly Smith and Kimberly Gilmore manage to remain calm during the frenzied preparations for the big night.

Look out world — this is the Class of '98! Lining up for their family and friends, these promising-looking students will do great things in their time.

Keeping On Course

The golf team finished the 1986 season with a 10-3-1 record. The only losses were to Wade Hampton and once to Willington. The team's record over the last three years is 26-13-1, and they have finished third in the state championships for the past two years. The only player graduating last year was Billy Howell, who will be missed, but the team looks forward to another winning year.

Diamonds Are Forever

Sophomore Wendy Litchfield comes to a halting stop as she reaches third base safely.

Wendy "Bones" Ulmer displays the latest fashions in shorts while awaiting her turn at bat.

Tara Ulmer backs up Wendy Litchfield and Renee Dennis as the ball slips through the gap.

Diamonds were truly forever in the eyes of the 1986 softball team. The team advanced to the state play-offs for the second straight year, only to be defeated in the first round by Calhoun Academy of St. Matthews.

Practicing every day after school definitely paid off as the girls compiled a 9-6 record and a second straight conference championship.

Connie Craven and Wendy Litchfield shared the most valuable player title.

First baseman Debbie Powers, a junior, bends low for a long throw from the short stop.

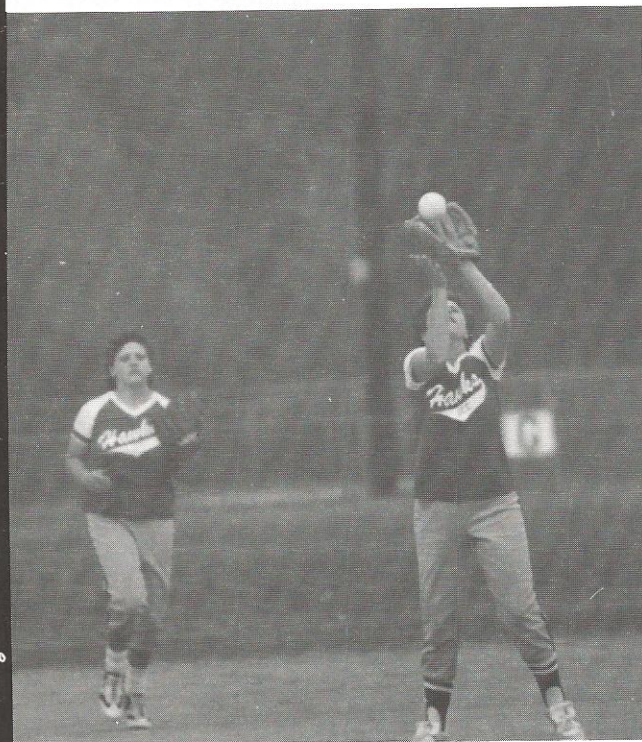

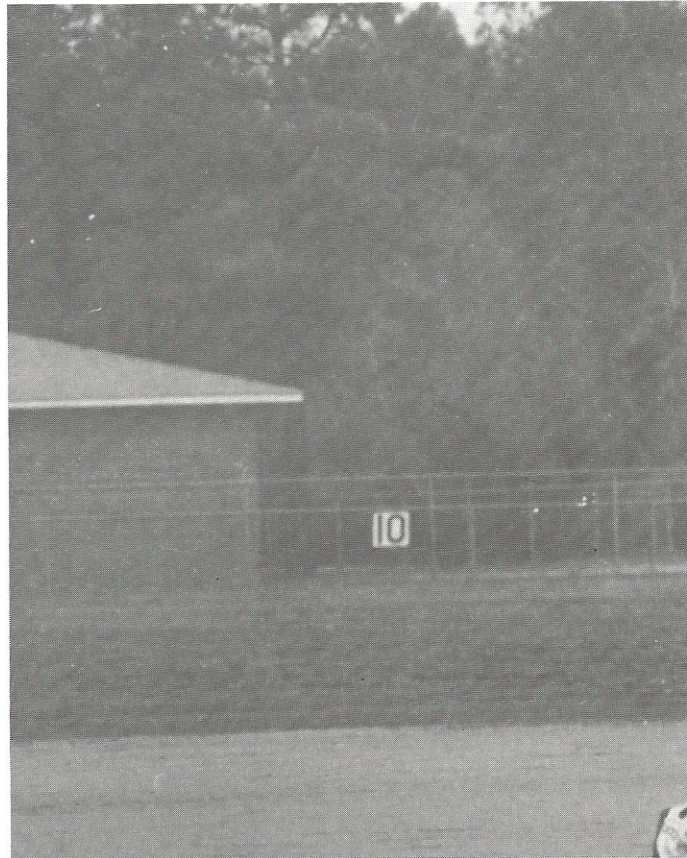

Second year coach Carol Meegan does not seem too pleased with the situation, even though her Hawks have the early lead.

Susan Zeigler attempts to advance from second to third as Thomas Heyward's short stop fields the ball.

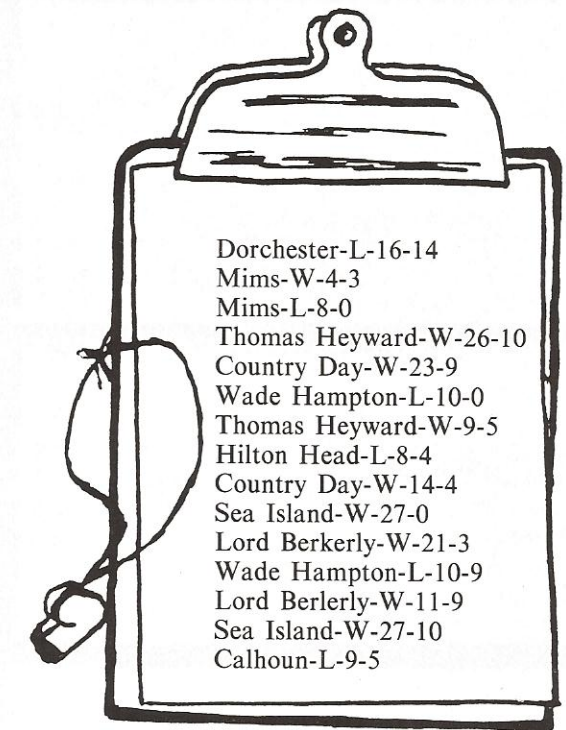

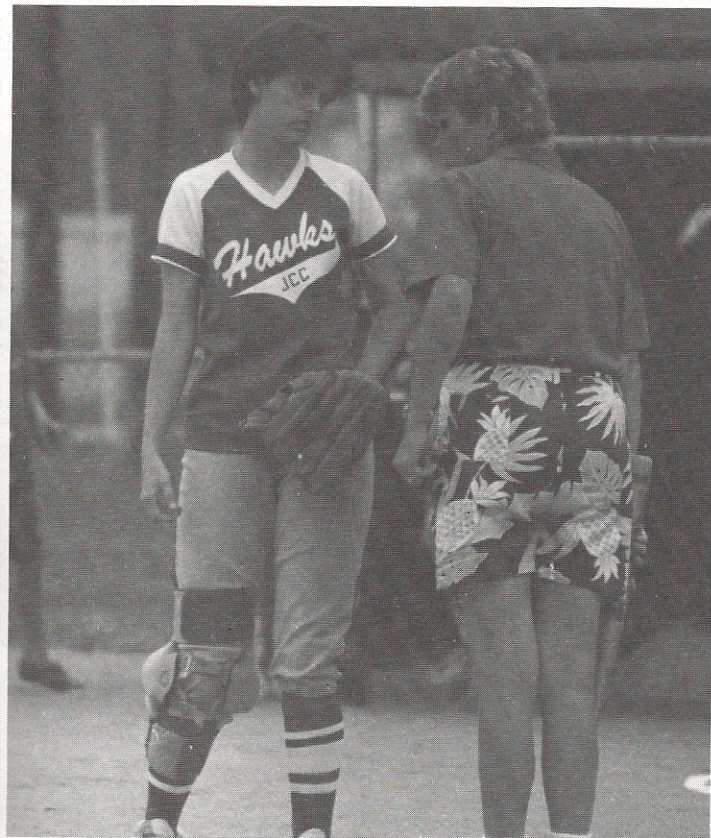

Second baseman Renee Dennis keeps her eyes on the popfly as Tara Ulmer backs her up.

Freshman Christy Steele arrives at second base safely, a long time before the ball arrives.

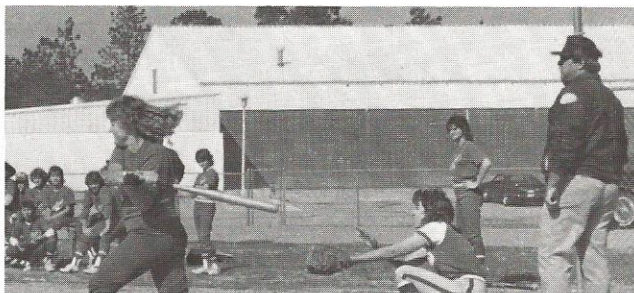

Pitcher Tracy Ulmer gets some last minute advice about the upcoming batters from Coach Meegan.

Michelle Hughes watches with care as the Lord Berkerly batter takes a swing.

The 1986 softball team earned its second straight conference championship and bid to the state play offs.

The Winning Edge

Although the tennis team at J.C. did not receive much recognition the team did keep in stride with other varsity sports. Both the girls' and boys' teams advanced to the state playoffs.

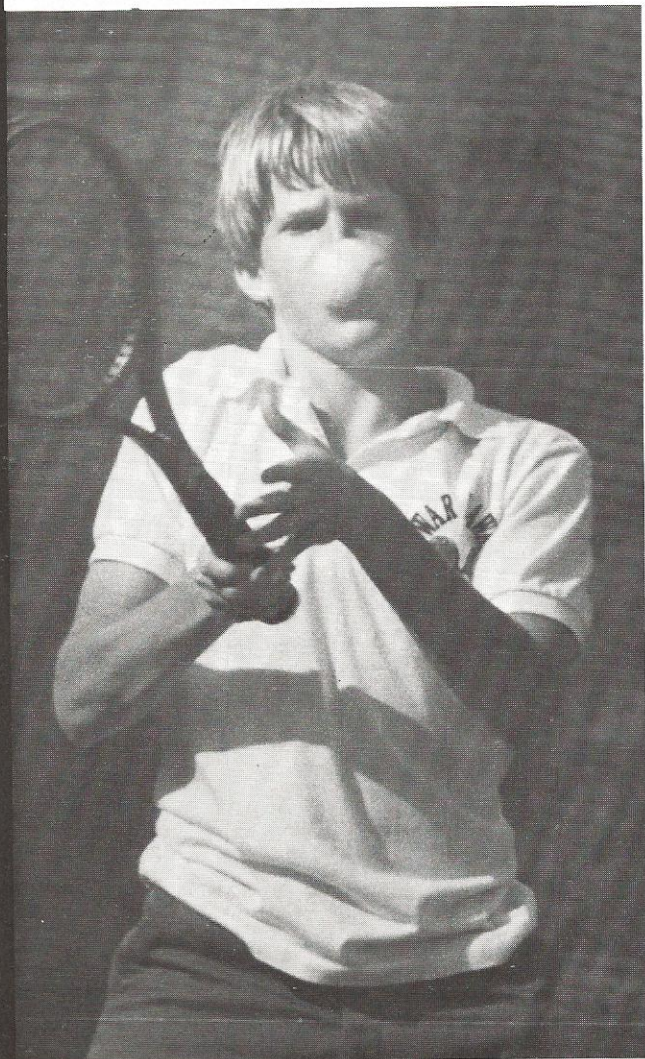

Neither team lost any players with the Class of '85, so experience was abundant. The boys' team coached by David McArthur, had six seniors. Under the direction of new coach Diane Fishburn, the three seniors on the girls' team led then to a productive season.

Both teams will lose some experience and talent with graduation. Number one players Cindy Smith and Allan Geohring will lead the teams.

Allan Geohring certainly has his eyes on the ball, determined to return it over the net.

Cindy Smith, a sophomore, prepares to use her forehand to return the serve of her opponent.

Senior Johnny Rodgers follows through on his forehand as he watches the ball go over the net.

Caroline Werntz, a senior, concentrates on returning the shot with her forehand.

The six senior members of the boys' team will be missed during the '87 season.

With graduation of three seniors, the girls' team will fill in the spaces with more experience.

Hit And Run

Gaining the much needed experience, the J.V. baseball team helped themselves and the school. By giving up time usually spent on homework, the young Hawks learned to manage that time. As for the school, those who made up the J.V. team will soon be playing in the "big league" varsity.

Asher Howell watched the path of the ball he just hit as it travels into the outfield.

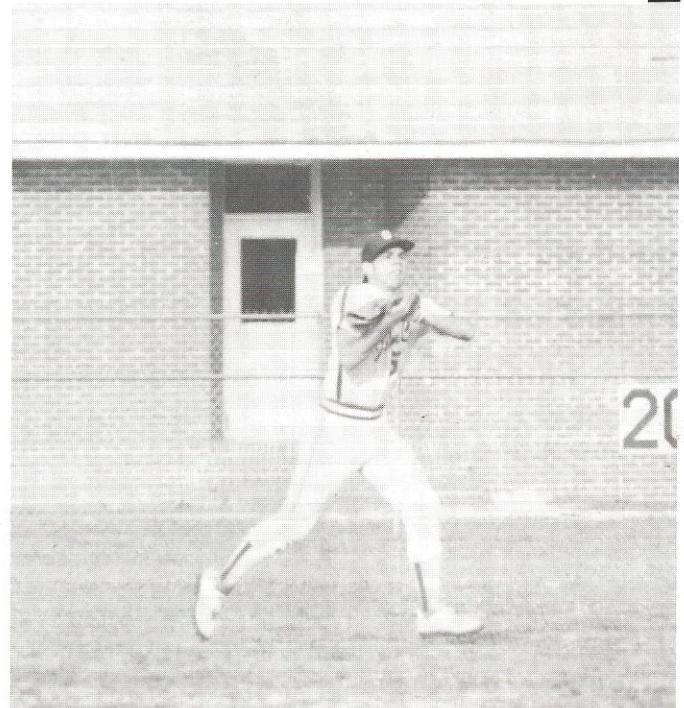

Wesley "Buckwheat" Jones takes a much needed rest on second base during a grueling practice.

Kevin Litchfield waits at first base for the throw from second base.

Slugging It Out

Sophomore Scott Pellum fires from his second base position in hopes of retiring the runner.

Senior Danny Beach catches up with the line drive before it reaches the fence.

Ward Ulmer, a senior who is now playing at the Baptist College, is too late to tag the Cardinal Newman runner out.

The Varsity baseball team of 1986 had an outstanding year. Under the coaching of Mr. Jim Winslett and Tony Orsini, the Hawks earned yet another state play-off bid.

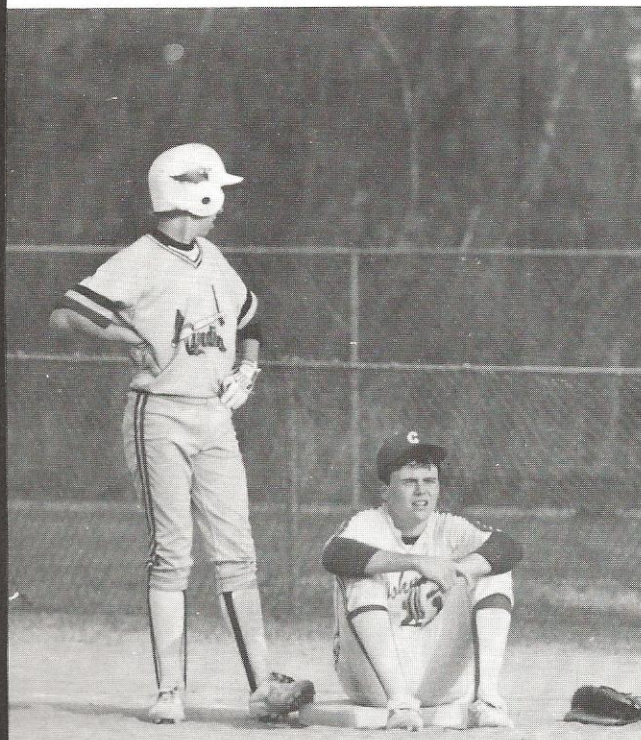

With a large number of seniors, they benefitted from experience. Their leadership helped the team through troubled times as well as celebrating the victory.

Having been to the state play-offs several times in the past few years, the team will be ready to go again this year.

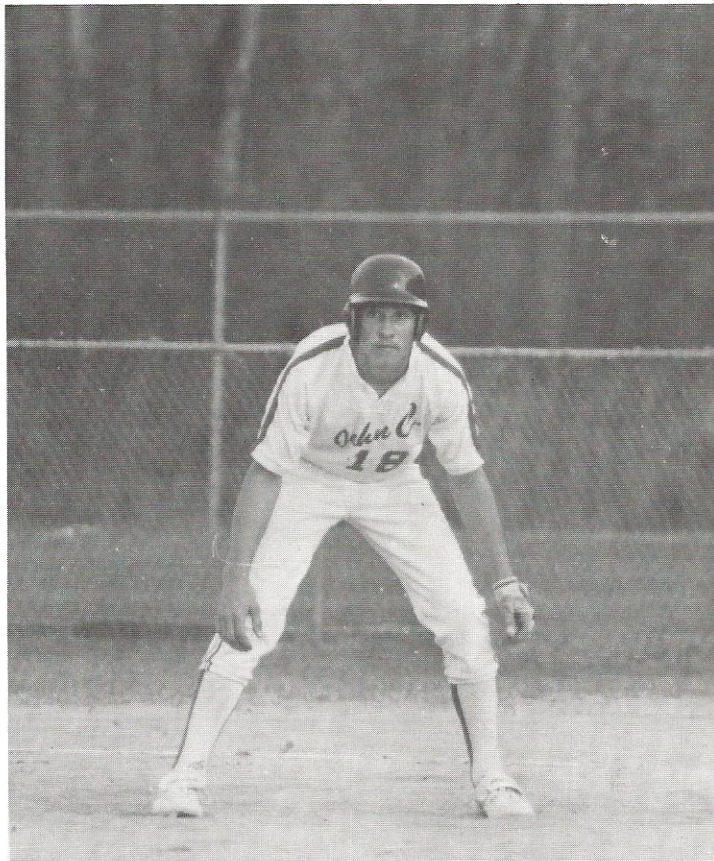

Danny Beach gets some much needed advice from Coach Winslett before the inning starts.

Pat Harmon, the first baseman, takes a break while a pitching change is being made.

The 1986 Varsity baseball team continues the school's string of consecutive appearances in the state play-offs.

Starting Out Young

The Boys' and Girls' B-teams, coached by Doc Lewis and Carol Meegan, definitely started out young. The teams consisted of 6th, 7th, and 8th graders. They not only gained knowledge about the rules and plays of basketball, but they also gained the experience needed of play on the Junior Varsity level.

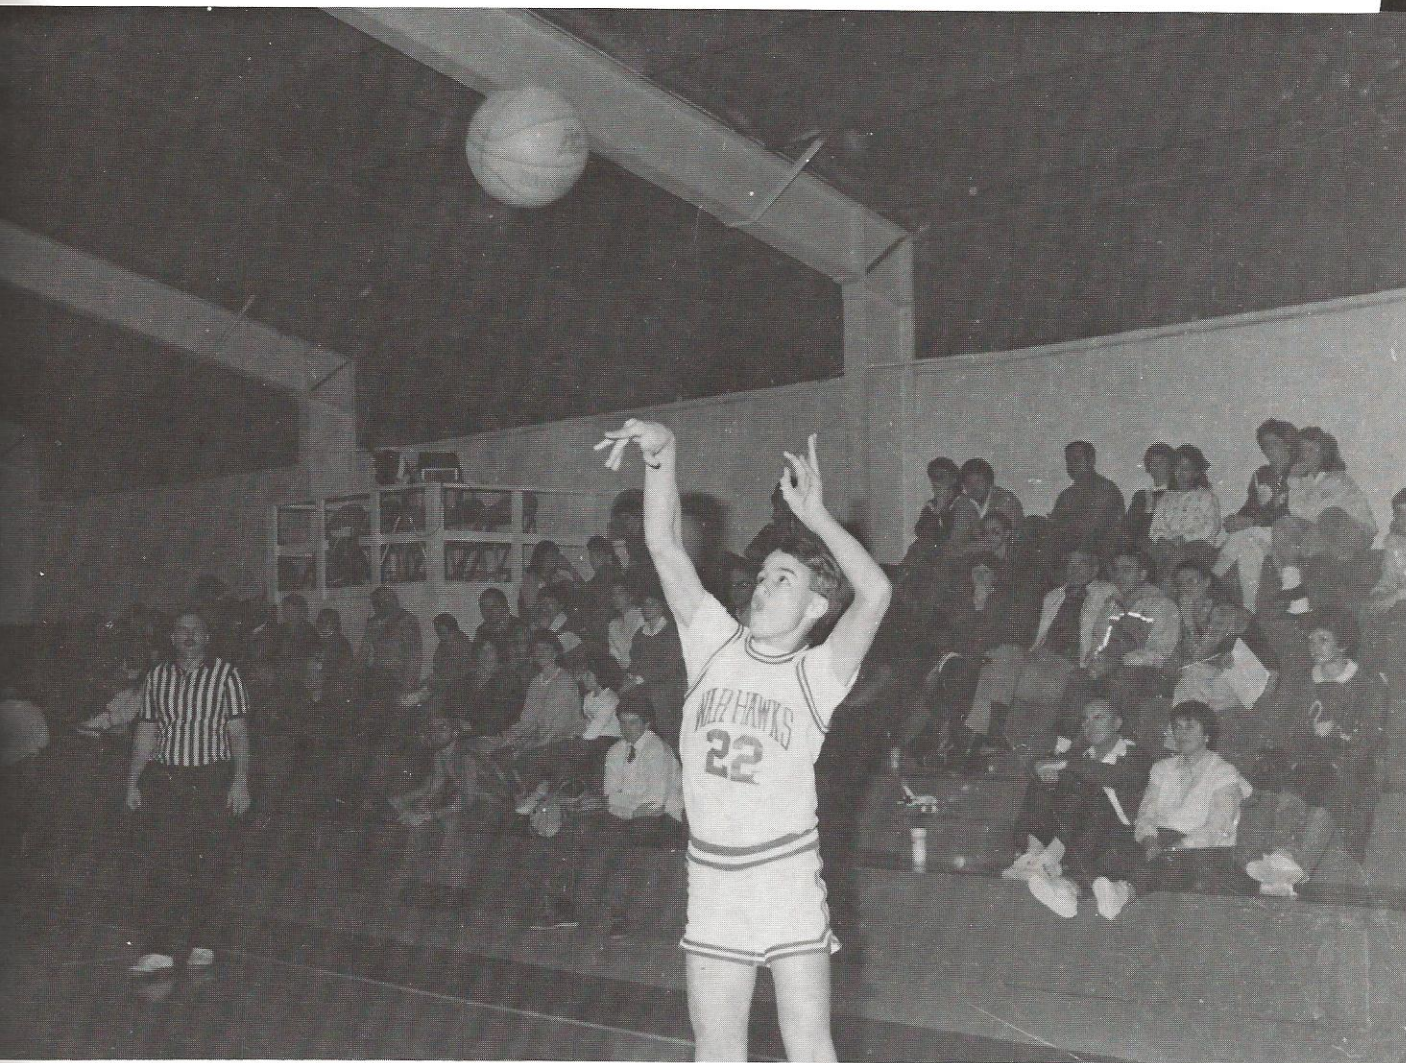

Landis Williams uses her height to out-jump a defensive player and put up a shot.

Ree Deloach waits to pass off as Jennifer Jones moves to the open area to receive the pass.

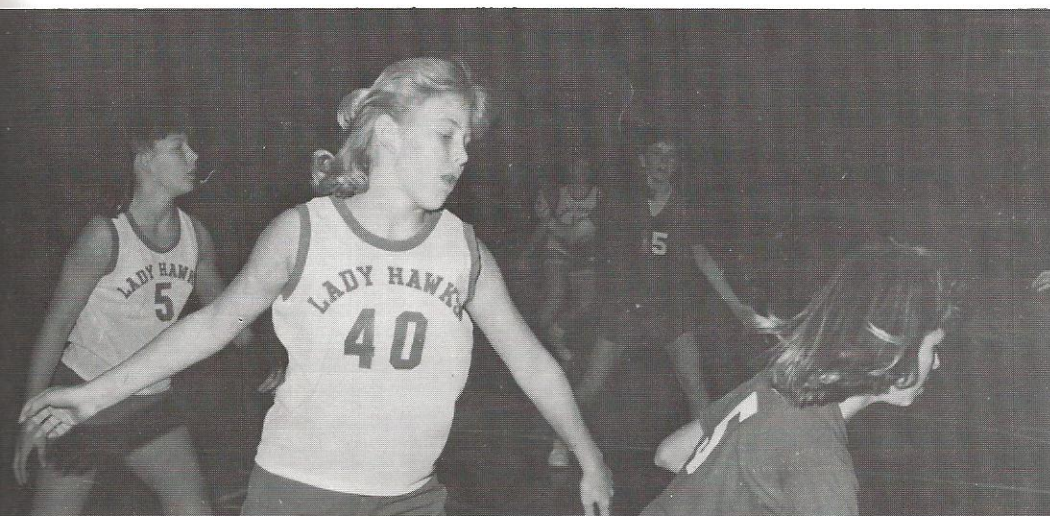

Asher Howell goes up high to grab the rebound and put it back in the basket.

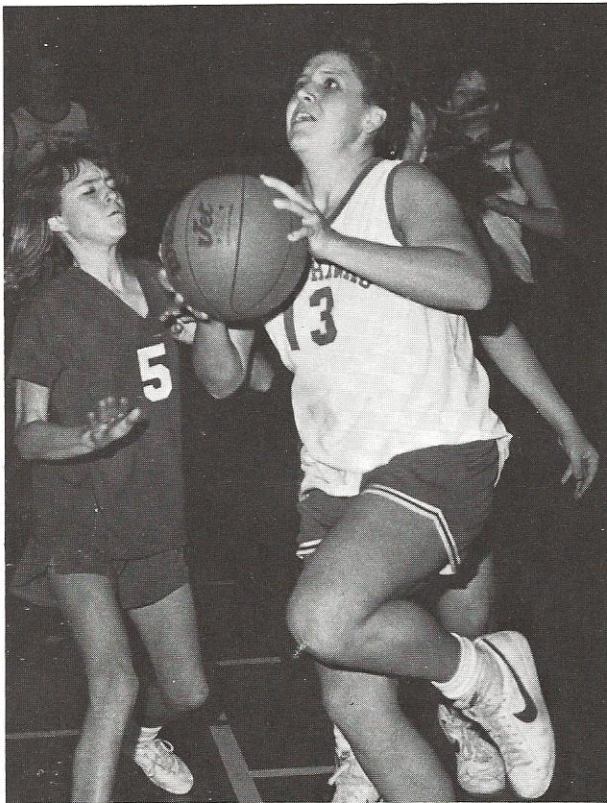

An excellent shooter, Edward Oswald puts up an outside shot with perfect form.

Kristie Smith, a first year player, moves into the defensive position to stop the offense's drive to the basket.

Too Hot To Handle

Freshman Tara Ulmer, the leading scorer, eyes the basket in hopes of another two points.

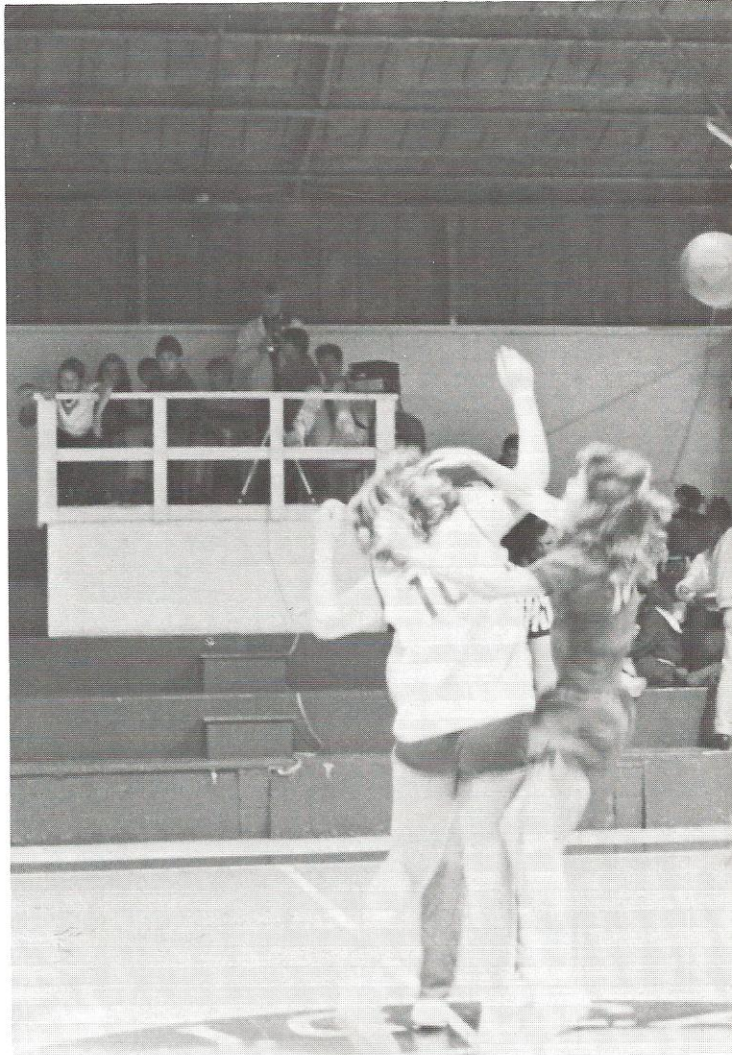

Coach Carol Meegan's "Baby Hawks" weren't babies any more. Victory after victory came their way this season, all because of their hard work and long hours of practice.

With only three players returning from last year's team, the young Hawks had to rebuild. That they did! They added some height and speed to the line-up and this brought them many exciting victories throughout the season.

Tara Ulmer, Susan Zeigler, and Hope McGrady provided the lady hawks with the much needed scoring and rebounding. The younger players did an excellent job filling in the vacant spots.

Third year coach Carol Meegan led this talented group of players to a successful season.

Micheal Ritter practices his bounce pass before the game. Michael also plays some on the Varsity team.

Cam Wertz, a freshman, looks to score two more as Kevin Beach blocks out the defensive player.

The Junior Varsity boys had their share of heart-breakers this year. All their hard work and dedication did pay off with several exciting victories.

Led by first year coach Brett Maddox, the young Hawks were exactly that, young. For most, this was their first year to play on the J.V. level. Many of them played on the B-team last year. Although the Hawks did not have the experience, they did have a great deal of heart and determination. They were able to work together as a team and that always paid off.

Kevin Beach goes for the basket to gain two more points over the Cavaliers.

Winning Isn't Everything

Hard work usually pays off, but the Lady Hawks had their share of bad luck this season. Led by Coach Carol Meegan, the Hawks saw their victories come few and far between. That did not stop them, though. They pulled together as a team both on and off the court. They could have been described as "one big happy family".

Seniors Debbie Powers and Jo Lynn Bennett provided the much needed leadership on the court. The underclassmen, who proved to have great athletic ability and were able to play with the stamina it takes, will fill the vacancies that the two seniors leave behind after graduation. Juniors Wendy Litchfield and Wendy Ulmer provided the team with balanced scoring and rebounding throughout the season. The team will be in good shape for a winning season next year.

Tracy Ulmer and Wendy Litchfield, both juniors, dive after the loose ball but it goes out of bounds.

Kelly Ferguson congratulates Wendy Litchfield as she celebrates the girls' first win.

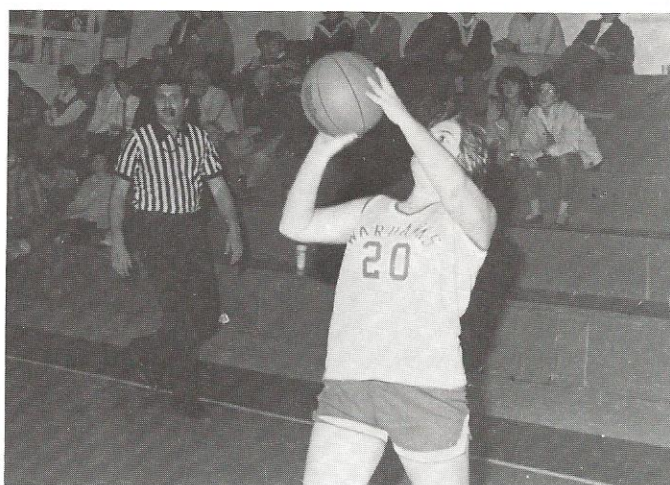

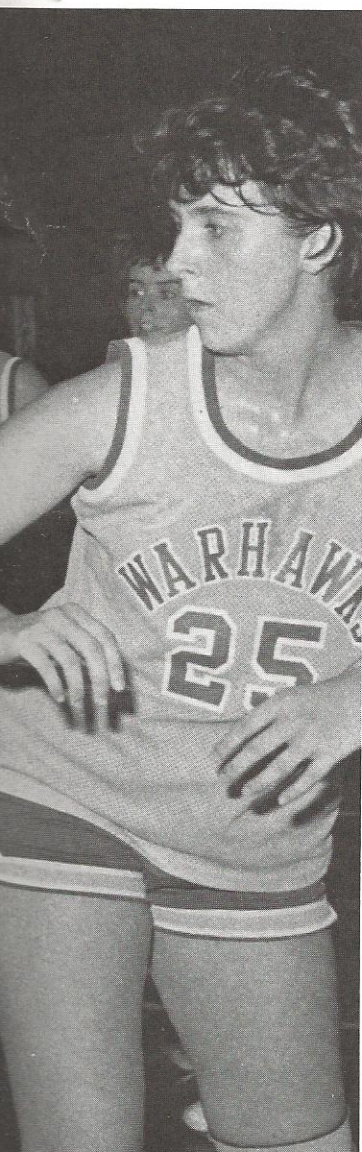

Only a sophomore, Allison Nettles puts up a shot as Debbie Powers moves in for the rebound.

Wendy Ulmer prepare to go for a shot while Debbie Powers gets into position for the possible rebound.

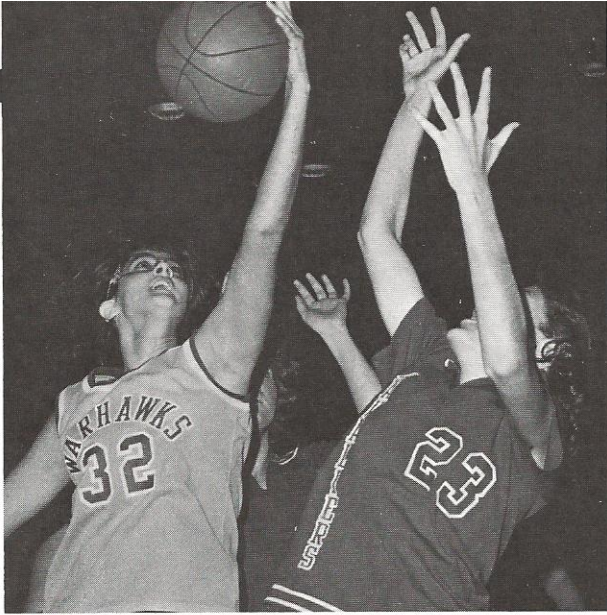

Senior Jo Lynn Bennett takes aim for another two points from the outside.

The 1987 Hawks are "one big HAPPY family" both on and off the court.

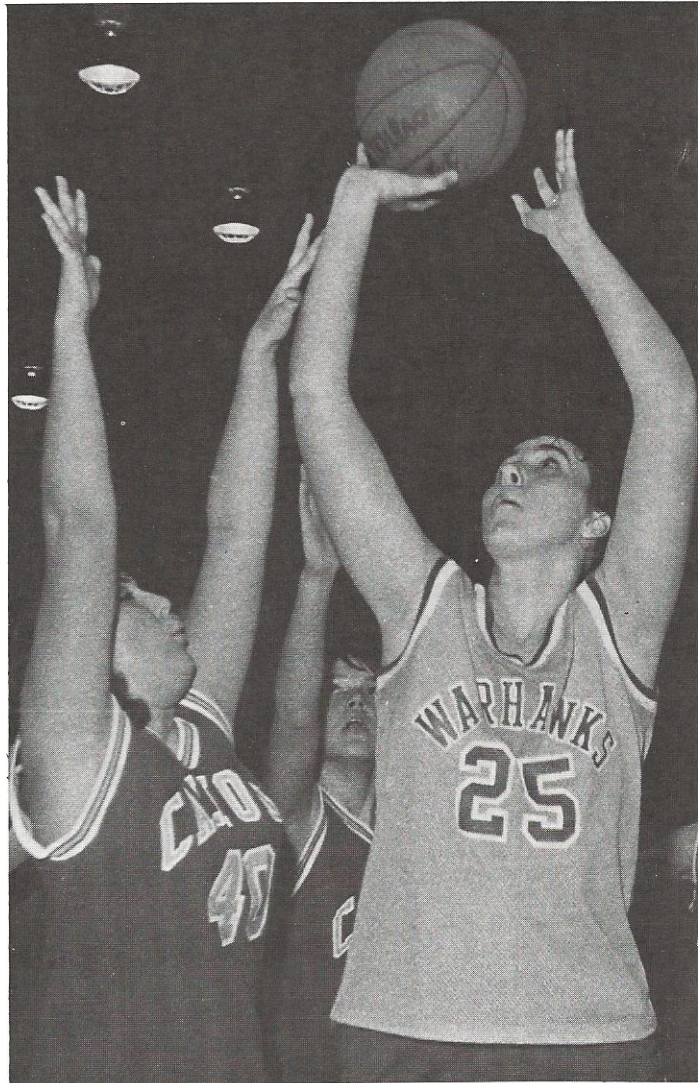

Wendy Ulmer grabs the rebound and hopes to put it back up for a basket.

Tracy Ulmer hustles to recover a loose ball before the Lord Berkely player can get to it.

Back At It Again

Team spirit, winning attitudes great athletic ability — these are some of the things that the Varsity boys were shooting for in the 1986-87 season. Each day, these boys could be found hard at work practicing to become a better team.

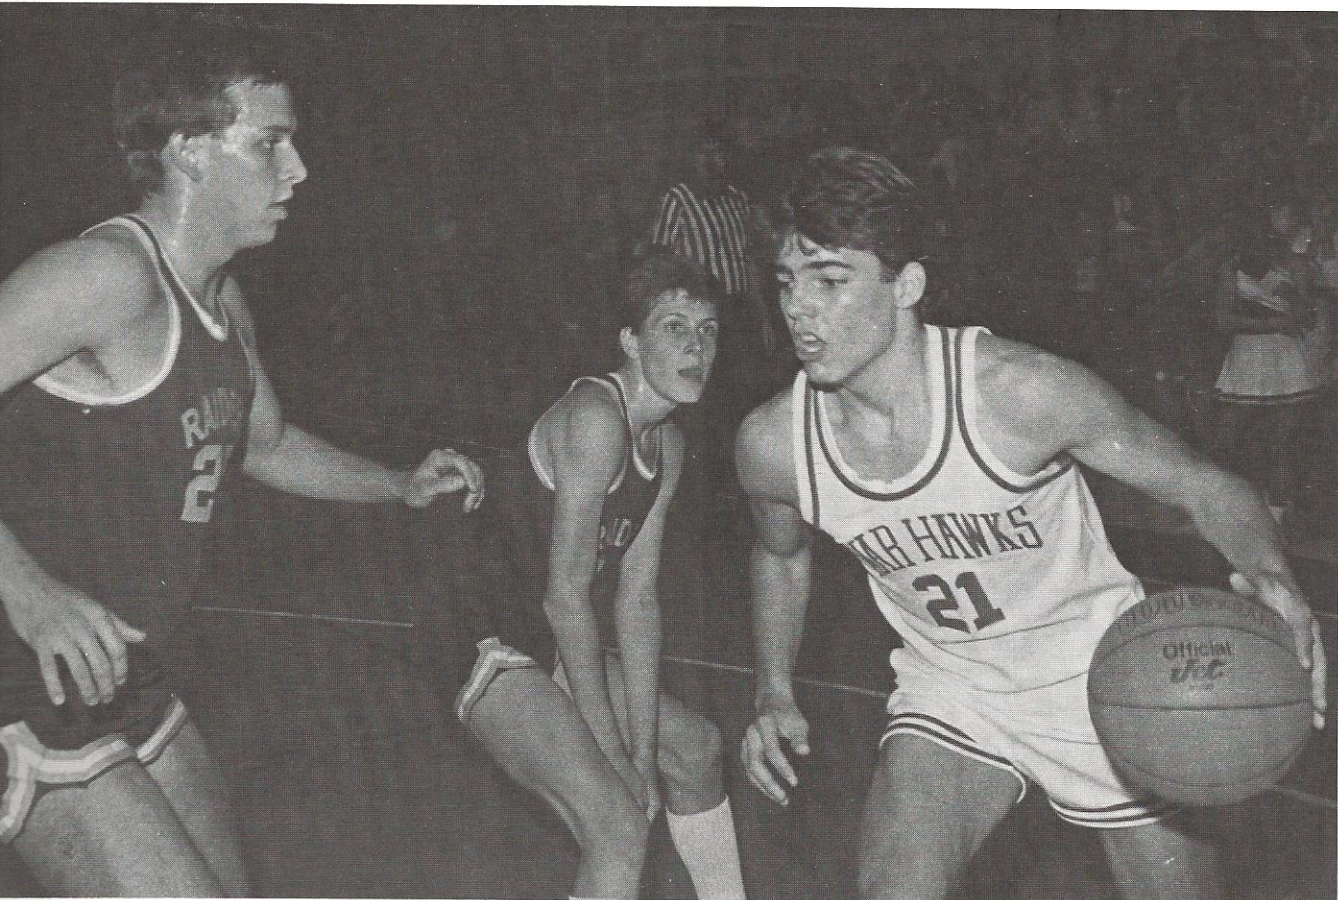

Brett Maddox, in his first year of coaching at J.C.C.A., encouraged and supported them at practices as well as on the floor during games. Coach Maddox demanded hard work on the floor as well as in the classroom. As a result, the team members respected his leadership. This paid off as the team captured many close games.

One of these close games came against longtime rival Thomas Heyward. Tiger Martin put up a shot with five seconds left on the clock to give the Hawks a great come-from-behind victory.

Senior Brian Strickland dribbles through the Lord Berkley defense and sets up the Hawks offense.

Junior Donald Martin drives to the basket to put up another two points.

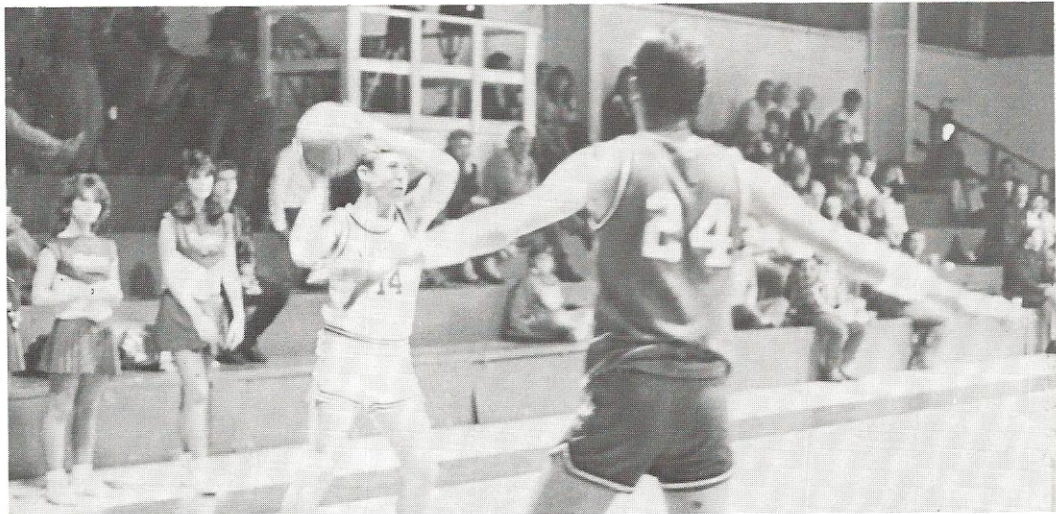

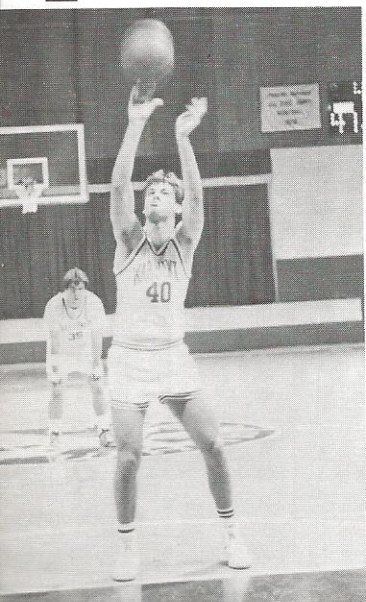

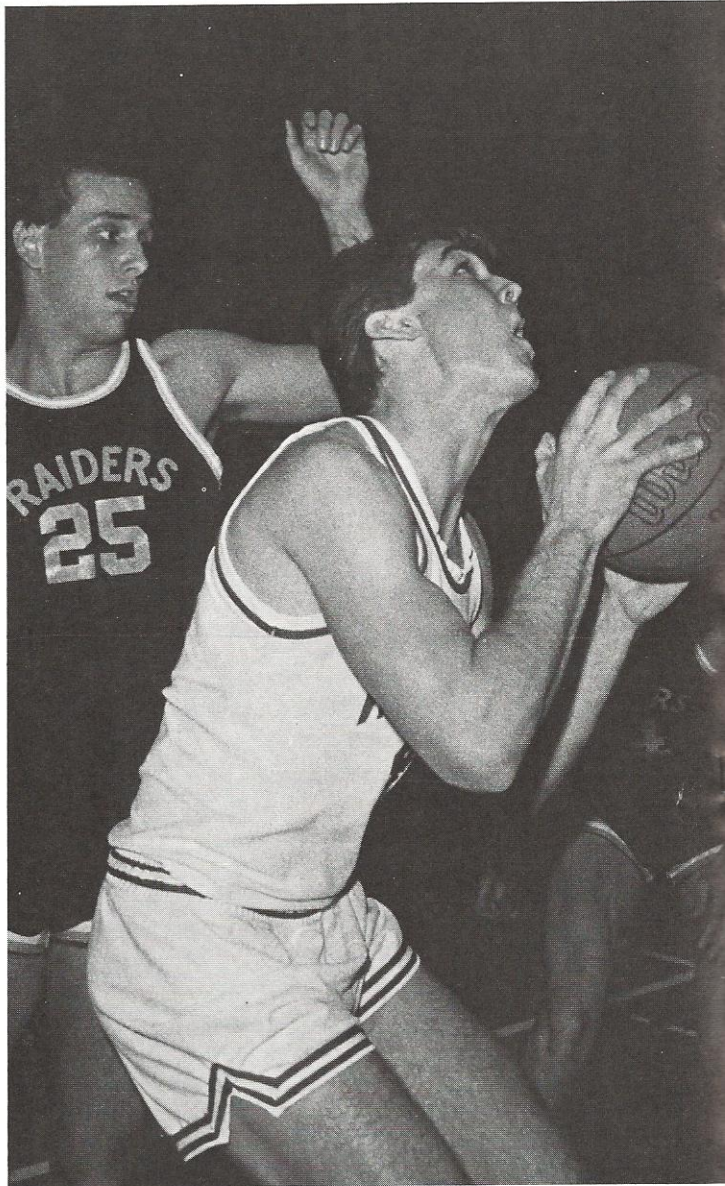

Heath Jones and Chris Rowe try to stop the offensive player from driving to the basket.

Eric McGill, an all-conference junior, looks to add one more point to the scoreboard.

In case Eric McGill misses, Tigger Martin has position for the rebound.

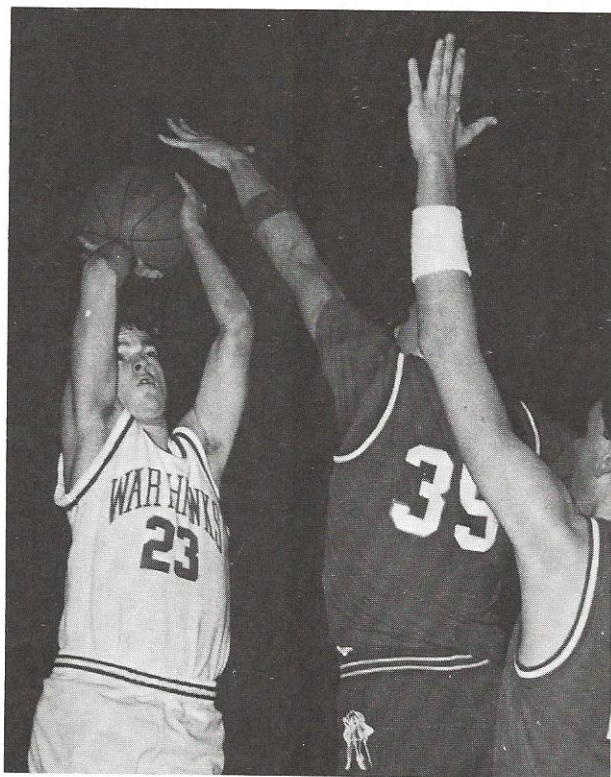

Eric Bennett passes off to an open teammate in hopes of beating the defense to the basket.

STARTING OUT YOUNG

With five new cheerleaders, the Junior Varsity squad had to almost start new. The new cheerleaders had to learn cheers, experience their first hectic week of camp and, along with the other five, had to cheer their team to victory.

At camp, the squad improved so much. They were chosen to compete in the final day evaluation. Even though they didn't win, they brought the "spirit stick" home for all their hard work.

Practices kept the squad extremely busy throughout the year. They had to paint posters, plan pep rallies and help out the varsity cheerleaders by selling programs at home football games. Each one had to give 100% effort for the year to be successful, and they must have, because it was a great success.

Freshmen, Teri Hudson and Keri Holmes and seventh grader Ashley Biggers raise their spirits high at a J.V. pep rally.

Everything has to be ready for the Hawks to "raid" the Raiders.

The tunnel is traditional for the football games at John C. Let's go Hawks!

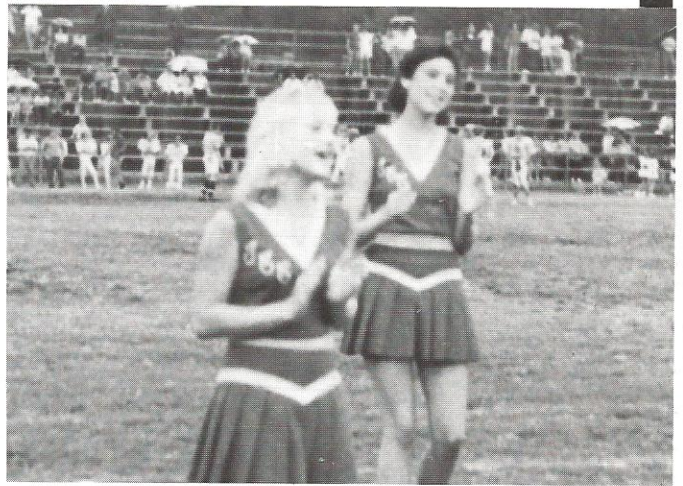

Freshman Heather Gahagan and captain Kim Strickland show cheerleaders are the best of friends.

Cheering their team to victory is just one of the responsibilities of a Junior Varsity cheerleader.

Newcomers Kristie Smith and Carla Valentine find out, come rain or shine, they must cheer.

TALENT LEADS TO SUCCESS

Practice does pay off. Look at this year's J.V. football team. Practicing every day, attending summer camp, and giving up spare time led to many exciting games.

Led by first year coach, Brett Maddox, the young Hawks gained the experience needed to play on the Varsity level. Quarterback Cam Wertz and running back Matt Free added spark to the Hawks' offense by either setting up or scoring many touchdowns.

The 1986 team consisted of Cam Wertz, Asher Howell, Jamie Bryan, Whit Carter, Scott Meegan, Matt Free, Bubba Jones, Stacey Padgett, Eric Bennett, Kevin Litchfield, Michael Smithe, Clark Hiott, Kenneth Greenwell, Grayson Altman, Eric Warren, Todd Meegan, Wesley Jones, Tim Godwin, Pat Padgett, and Lance Dennis.

The Hawks enter the field ready to play Thomas Heyward.

Not only do they play, but several players lead cheers at a pep rally.

Although small, Wesley Jones gives football his all.

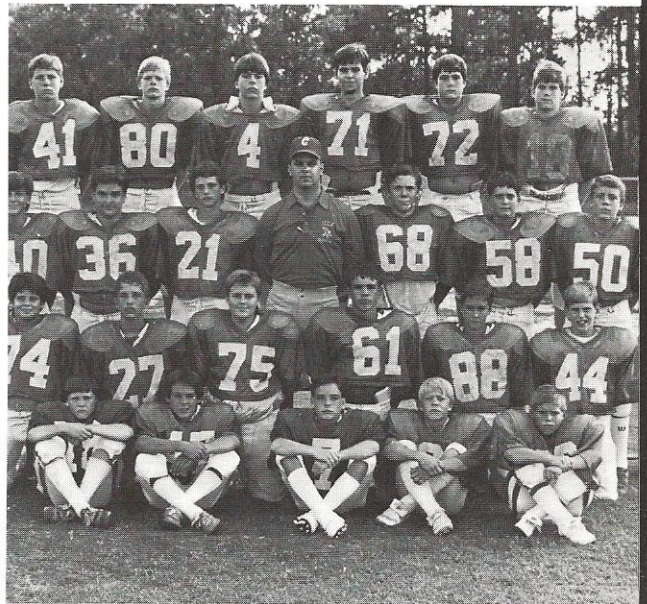

The Thomas Heyward defense successfully stops the Hawks' play.

The J.V. team takes advantage of a sunny day to relax and enjoy a pep rally.

Led by Coach Brett Maddox, the young Hawks gave their fans their money's worth in excitement.

OVERFLOWING SPIRIT

To be a Varsity cheerleader, you have to have spirit energy, time and more spirit. This year's squad had all of this plus more.

For the third straight year, the squad returned home from camp in the summer with camp championship. Unlike past years, they had to beat out several co-ed squads that were among the thirty public and private squads there. One of the co-ed squads was advisor Laura Spears' high school alma matar.

Although few people realize the fact, the varsity cheerleaders spent many long hours practicing, painting posters, planning pep rallies, and raising school spirit. They gave up their spare time to cheer their team to victory whether rain or shine.

With only one senior on the squad, nine of this year's squad could be on the squad next year to carry on the winning tradition. Although it may look easy, this can only be accomplished through hard work, long hours, dedication, and most of all, lots of energy.

With smiles in place, the cheerleaders demonstrate their award winning form that brought them and the school a third straight camp championship.

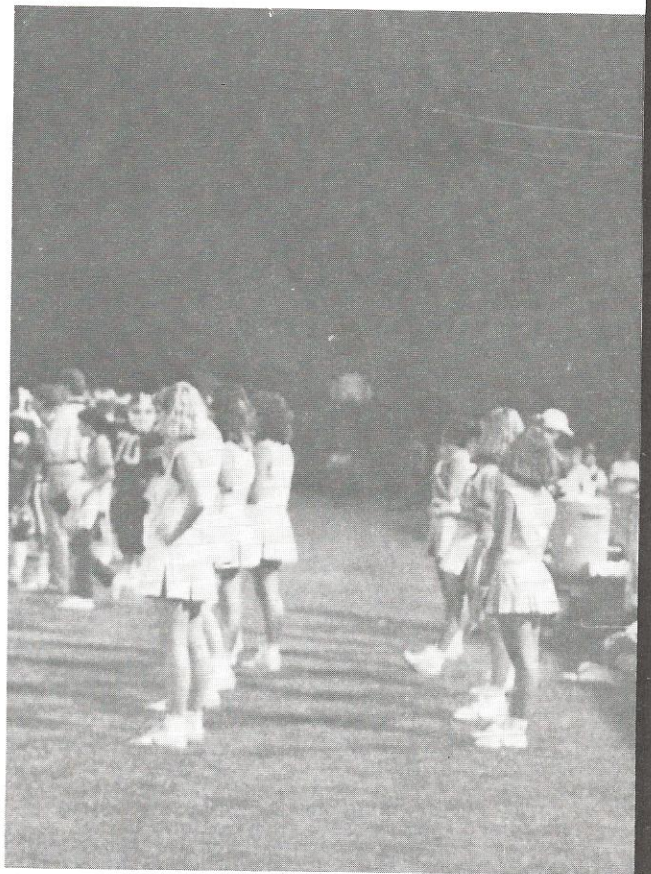

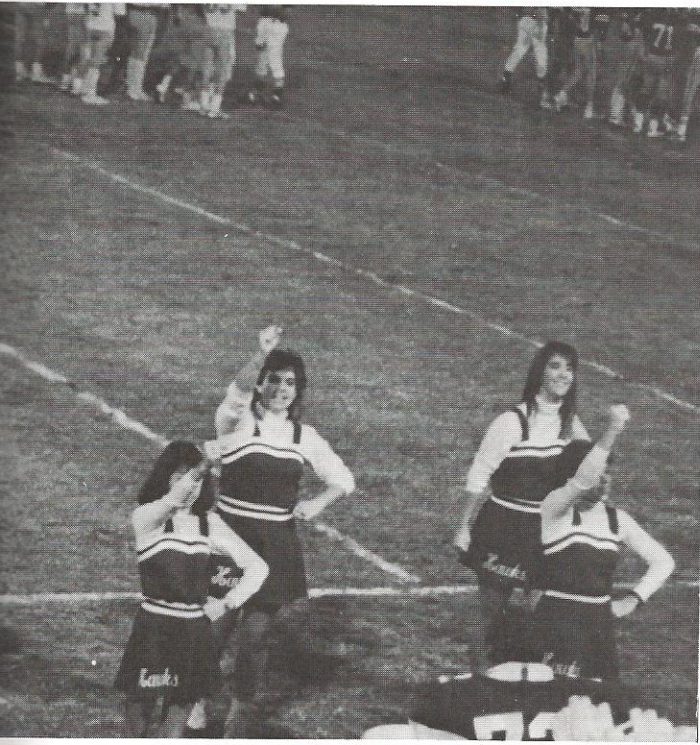

When cheering, the squad must also keep track of the excitement of the game.

Cheering isn't all hard work. Allyson Haynes and Caroline Linder get to decorate Chris Rowe's face with paint at the pep rally.

What a pyramid! Let's see the football players try and top that one!

The varsity cheerleaders anxiously await the start of another action-packed football game.

The only newcomer to the squad, Kelly Ferguson, found happiness in cheering.

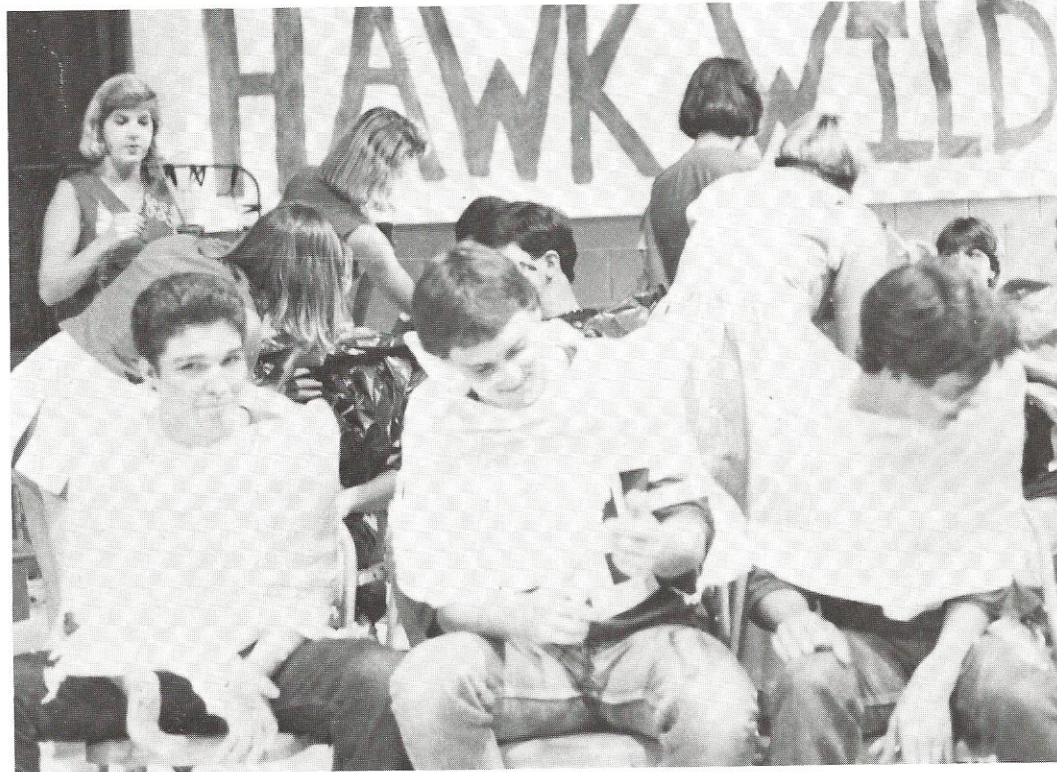

With the help of advisor Laura Spears and bases Elizabeth Biggers and Emily Warren, Toni Wilson shows a perfect table top.

Facing the football team, the cheerleaders hope to encourage their team on to another big victory.

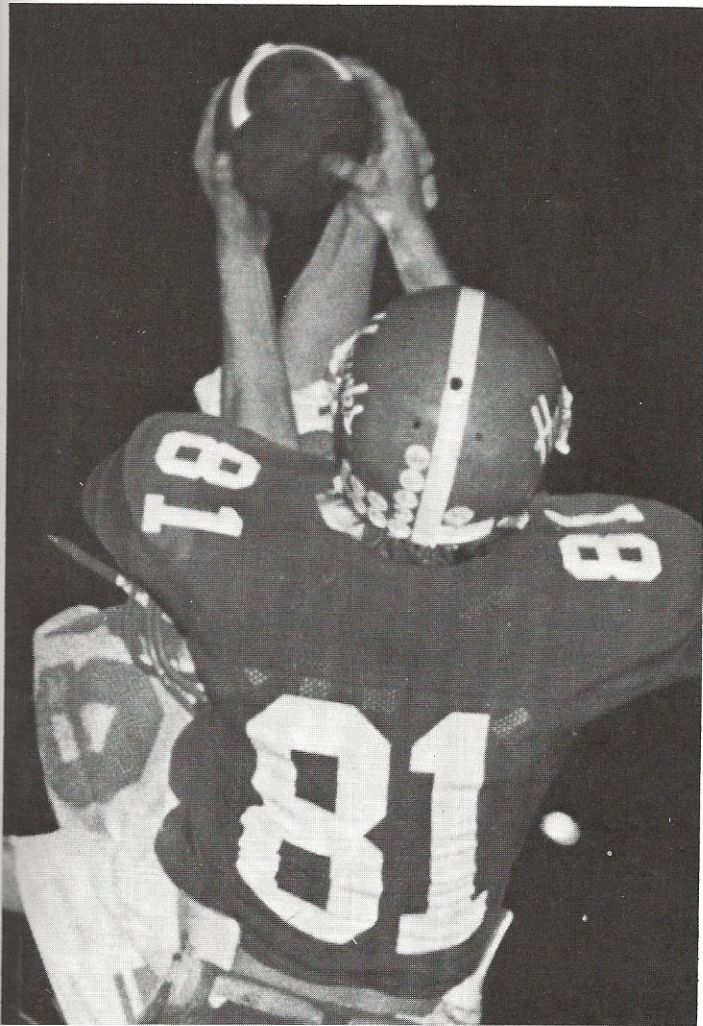

Since they won the skit at the pep rally, the cheerleaders go "Hawk Wild" painting the football players' faces.

"Friends we are,
Friends we'll always be,
Together we will cheer so faithfully.
Cheerleaders we'll always be 'till we meet again."

AN UP AND DOWN SEASON

The varsity football team had a season filled with excitement and sorrow. They came close in many games, but they only won two.

Coached by Tony Orsini, the Hawks had a feeling of closeness, determination to win, and hours upon hours of long, hard practices. This group of young men wanted to make their parents, friends, and the school proud of them. They definitely succeeded.

Led by the all-conference play of seniors Marc Warren and Henry Mills, junior Eric McGill, and sophomore Todd Fennell, the Hawks brought home a victory for Homecoming. Not only was it a victory but also it was against rival Country Day.

The 1986 team consisted of seniors Brian Strickland, Marc Warren, Chris Hulsey, John Hamilton, and Henry Mills. These five players will be missed next year.

Eric McGill has to stretch high to take a pass out of his defender's hands.

Senior Brian Strickland and manager Kevin Beach take a moment to reflect on the last series of plays.

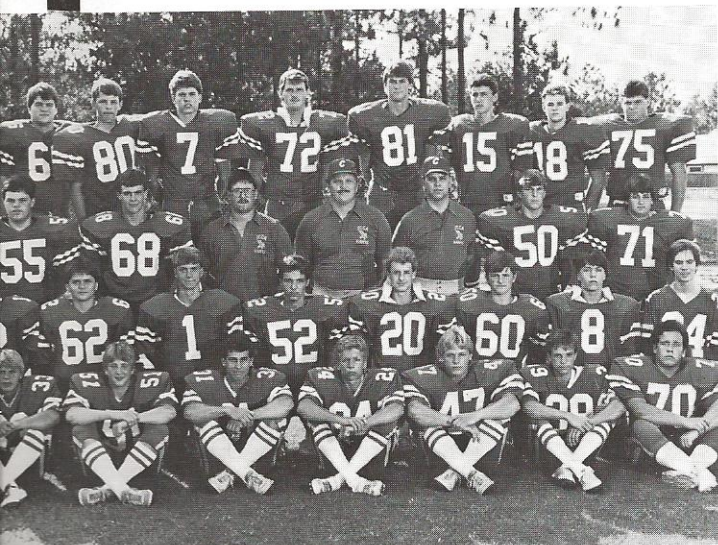

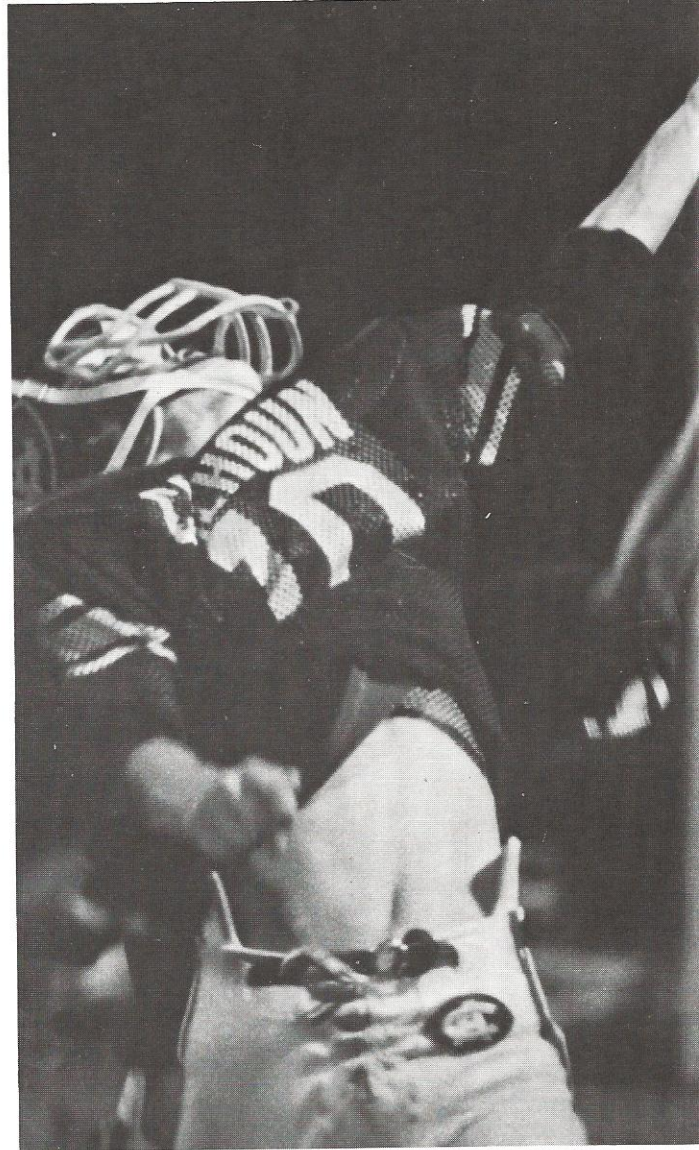

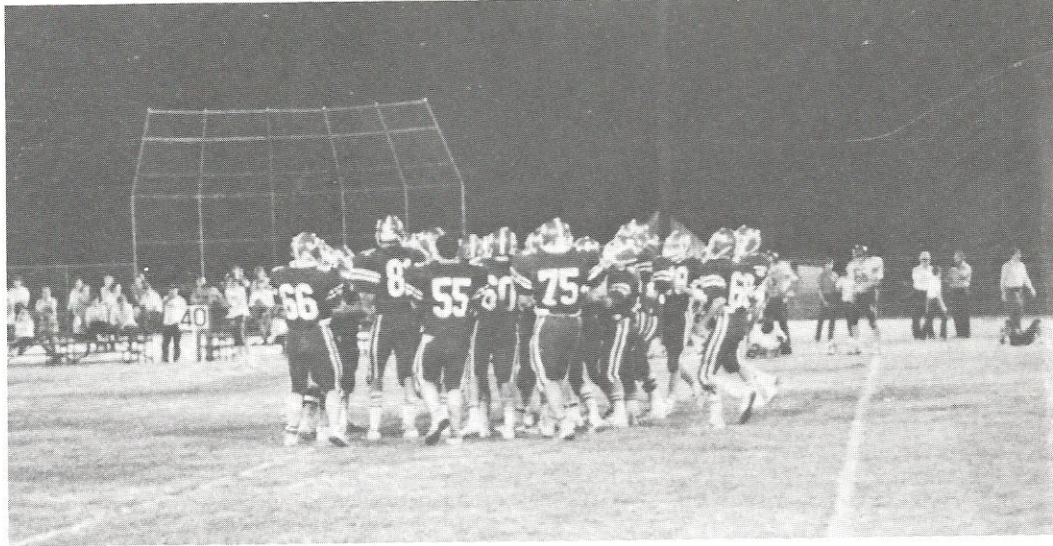

Junior quarterback Donald "Tiger" Martin outruns everyone and heads towards the endzone for a touchdown.

The Hawks gather at mid-field to encourage each other and get the game under way.

Senior Henry Mills is tackled, but not after a large gain that came with help from his blockers.

Under head coach Tony Orsini and assistant coaches "Doc" Lewis and Brett Maddox, the Hawks provide excitement for both family and friends.

Junior tight end Eric McGill reaches for a pass that has been deflected by one of Calhoun Academy's defensive player.

Junior Michael Warren sets his sights on tackling Orangeburg Prep's quarterback for a loss.

Eyeing the endzone, first-year player Terry Jones, a junior, breaks several tackles on his way down the field.

Anxiety filled the halls. Teachers began to notice a change in student behavior. Excitement and joy could be seen on their faces. The warm spring breeze brought the sweet smell of green grass and flowers. It signaled the start of summer and the close of a great school year.

"How could I forget the time I tripped in front of the whole class. I could have died!" "Do you remember when Scott spilled that coke down your back? Just thinking about the expression on your face still makes me laugh." — It was a time to recollect the events that made the year special, the times of embarrassment and the times of joy.

The days were counting down. Good-bye hugs were exchanged in the halls. As the final bell rang, each student raced out the door. The year was over, but it was not forgotten.

With the teacher gone, Wendy Hiott and Holly Roberts hang out the window to talk to friends.

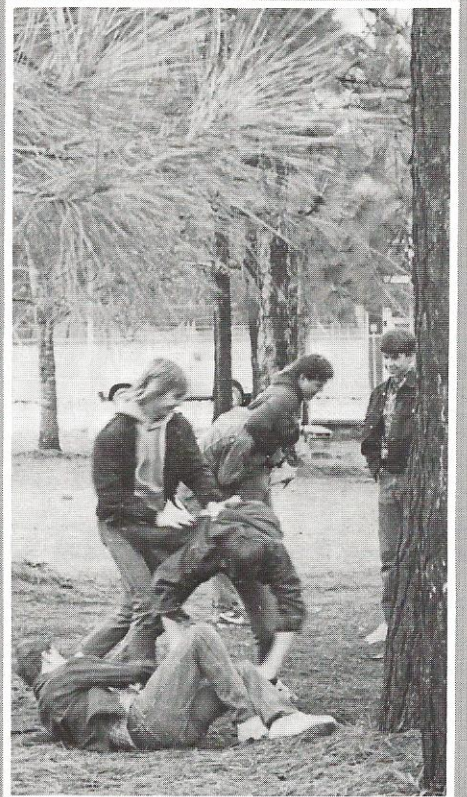

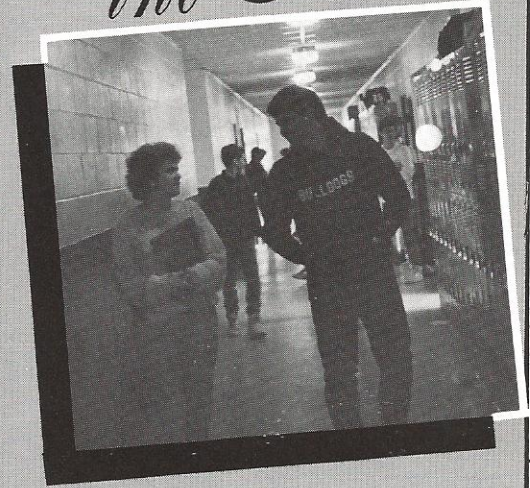

These two boys get the playground all to themselves, no more waiting for the swings.

Yeah, Recess! These energetic children need a break from school work.

Looking Into the Past

Renee Dennis and Al Standley reminisce about their past weekend as they walk down the hall.

Boys will be boys. It just wouldn't be a normal day without at least one fun fight.

Looking ahead

One more year has past by. There was no more need to study, but there was a need to plan; plan the events that would take place in the near future.

The pressures didn't end with school. Graduated seniors faced the terrifying yet, exciting world of college. Sheets, towels, clothes and much more had to be bought before the end of summer. Pencils, lunch boxes, and compositions were needed for newcoming kindergarteners. Upcoming juniors had to plan out their fund raising activities. The new seniors prepared for their last and final year of high school. Athletes trained to keep in shape for summer camp. Even teachers spent most of their summer at school getting ready for the new year.

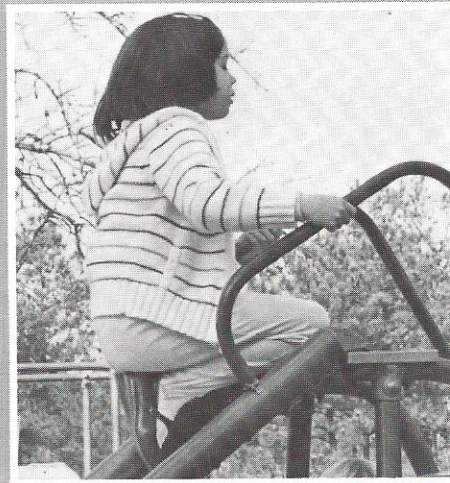

It was a time to look ahead and prepare for a stable future, for the future would soon become the present.

Ashley Hudson examines the canteen food to see if it is eatable.

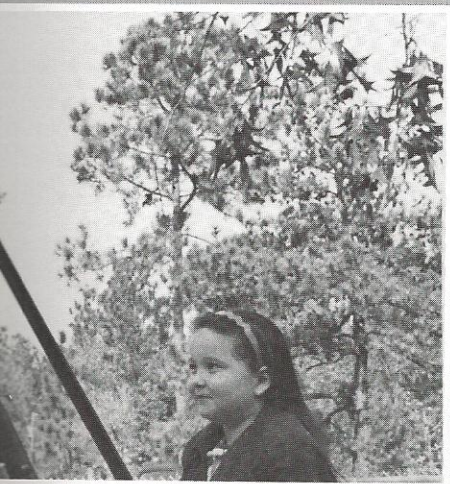

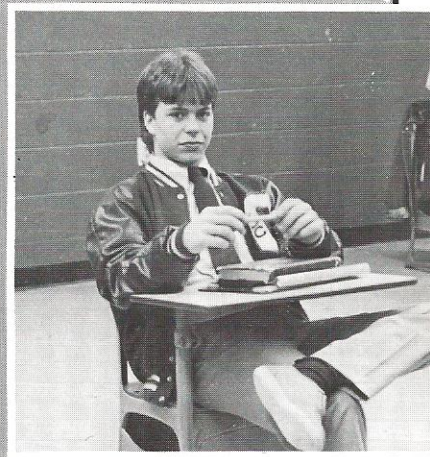

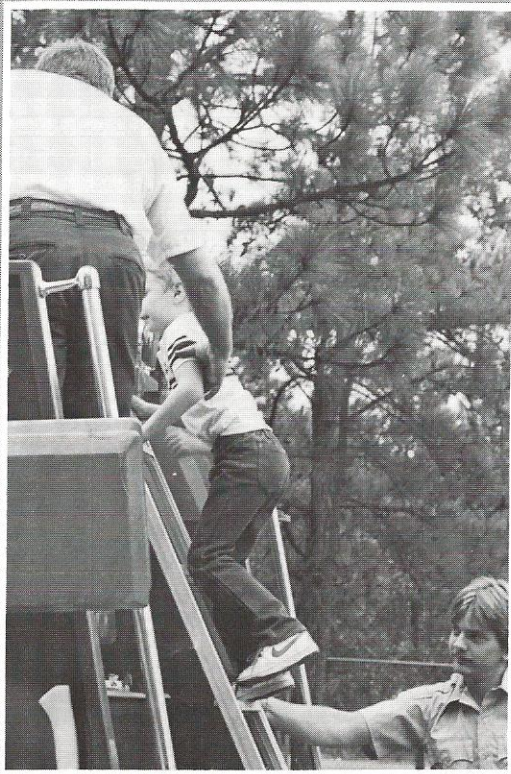

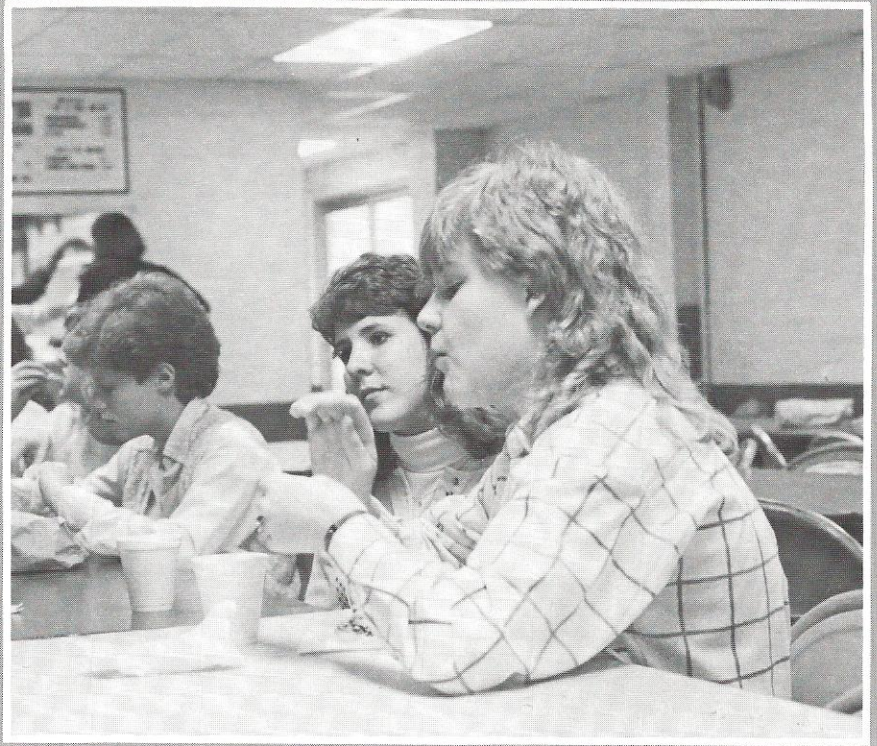

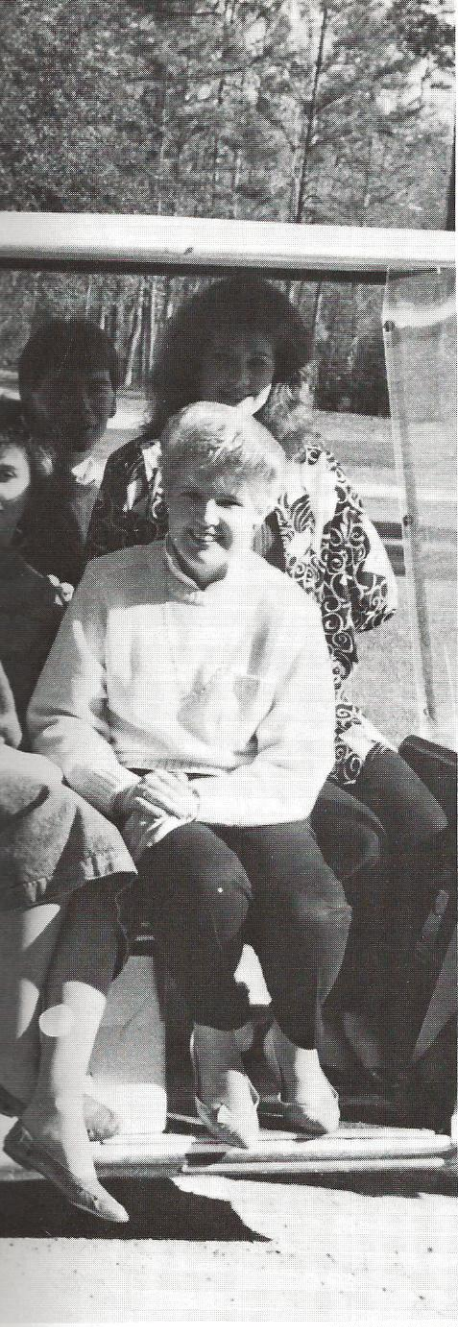

Do you really think all these seniors know how to play golf? You're right, they don't. Actually, they just enjoy riding the golfcart.

Come on, don't be shy. Drew Brightwell refuses to have his picture made.

Finding out the hard way, Amy Gentry agrees that the soup is HOT!

After a tiresome class of algebra, Heath Jones takes a minute to relax and think about the upcoming weekend.

After riding the firetruck, David Orsini decides to devote his future to becoming a lean mean firefighting machine.

Who could forget the fun of growing up and the fun of playing on the playground.

One Last

Look

Don't be afraid Coach Orsini, it's only a haircut.

Caught'eh! So, all this time it's been Coach Lewis stealing the french fries.

Bud Williams, Elizabeth Biggers, and Matt Hiott show off their guilty smiles after being tardy for class.

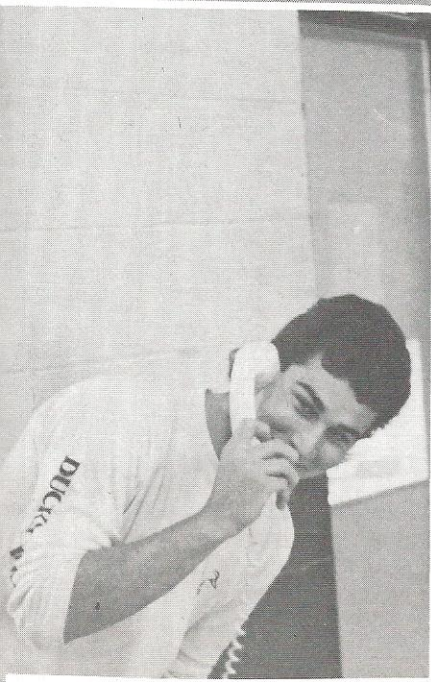

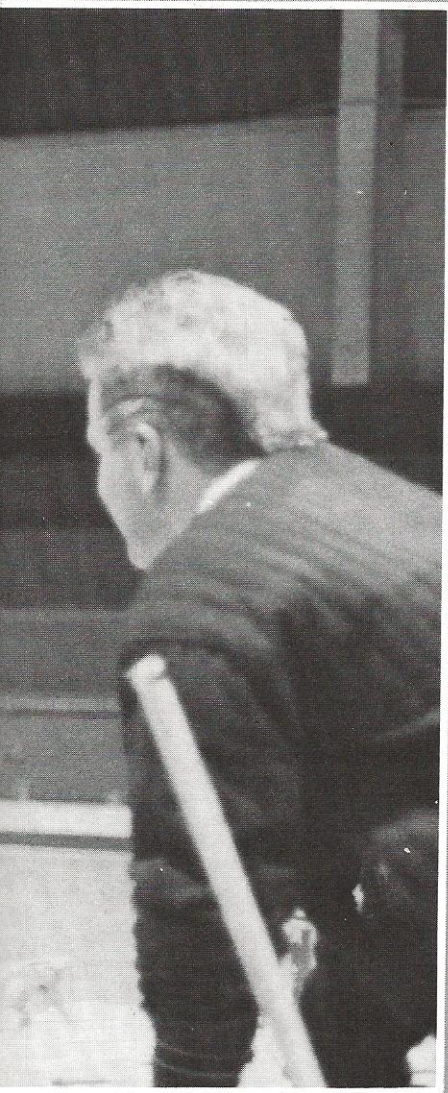

Monta Perrine and Tracy Ulmer study for Mrs. Griffith's "killer" test.

Who is Henry Mills calling now? From the looks of his smile, they must be important.

The big one prepares you to take on almost anything the future will bring your way. It's our savings passbook.

The pocket-sized one is our checkbook. For day-to-day matters, it's easier and safer to carry than a lot of cash.

Both books are simple to obtain.
