

These seventh graders find P.E. is much more exciting when they share the fun. Not a bad way to spend sixth period, either!

TALON

1000

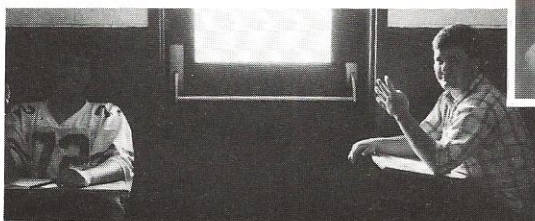

Wendy Litchfield and Scott Pellum share lunch and each other's company at the cafe at Charlestowne Landing.

No one enjoys a good football game more than these second-graders, Lance Wilson, Will Haynes, Michael Castle, and Tony Fagnoli. Who could lose!

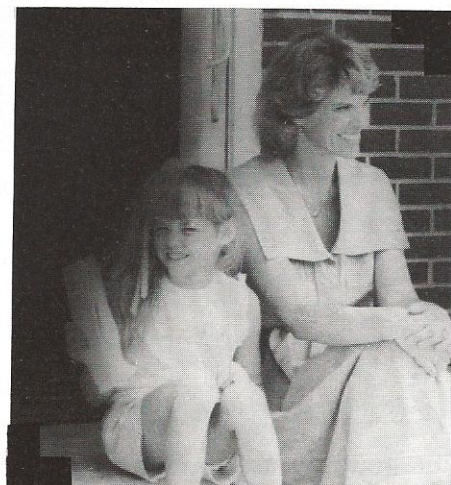

You know how it goes, you say one thing wrong, and BOOM! You're kicked out of class! It's not so bad in the hall when you're not alone, to which Whit Carter and Bubba Jones can attest.

The four musketeers? No, just four rowdy third graders living it up in the canteen.

Scrapbook

Friendship is a wonderful thing. It spans cultures, miles, and even generations. Imagine all that you learn through interaction of generations, and learning is one of the best aspects of friendship. Teachers can prove to be the best friends you'll ever meet, guiding you through school and helping to mold you into the person you want to be, while learning a lot themselves from the fresh insight so typical of youth.

Mrs. Howell spends as much time as possible with her students, showing them at the young age of kindergarteners that teachers are friends too.
