

Youthful Attitude Gives Faculty Advantage

The youthful attitude of the faculty here at John C. has really helped the students through the past year. They have literally taught everything there is to teach. And they have taught it well!

The faculty and administration have spent a great deal of time preparing the students for graduation and having to go out into the world to college and jobs.

The teachers had to make up tests, grade them, and give many notes and review on the test material. They had just as much homework as the students; sometimes they had a lot more homework.

EXAMS! Everyone hated them, but the teachers feel exams are necessary when facing college and the excuses given there is well as how much the students had learned and retained throughout the semester.

There was a lot of pressure on the teachers but they always helped the students to become better people.

Mr. Bennett, Mrs. Litchfield, and Mrs. Beach know the office is not "all work and no play."

Mr. Bennett must keep the mint candy in stock because he offers it to everyone in the office.
