

The End And The Beginning

Graduation was the end and the beginning for the Class of '87. It was the end of their career at John C. Calhoun. These students would no longer be together as a group. The Class of '87 realized that now they were not the head of the school but young men and women heading out into the big world. This was the beginning of greater responsibility and more determination for the long road ahead.

As the students listened to the words of their fellow classmates Jonnie Neal, Valedictorian, and Debbie Powers, Salutatorian, varied thoughts raced through their minds. Joy mixed with sadness shown on all faces. Hopes, dreams, relief, and even dread could be seen. But no matter what the future held for each they knew they would always be proud to be a John C. Calhoun graduate.

Marc Warren, Traci Warren, and Mark Williams, begin to bubble with enthusiasm as the graduation exercise comes to an end.

Traci Warren gives a big smile for the camera as she walks down the aisle.

Congressman Arthur Ravenel, the guest speaker at graduation, gives the students a vote of confidence as they head into the world.
