You're never too old to enjoy it — Sisters Amy and Allison Goehring take advantage of the snow to go outside and live a little!

Unforgettable

January 15, 1988: alarms went off as usual, and sleepy hands groped to turn them off. A casual glance outside, however, stunned each student into full consciousness. There was actually snow on the ground!

A week earlier, the snow would not have been such a surprise. Sleet, freezing rain, and icy roads kept the school closed for a day and a half, and caused two basketball games to be canceled. But this week, Friday's weather was totally unexpected — and the extended weekend brightened everyone's forecast!

Young and old, student and teacher, neither age nor position prevented anyone from enjoying the unusual, and brief, respite from school's responsibilities.

William Williams is in another generation that loves the view from the "big" slide.
