The Junior Varsity cheerleaders had the spirit, confidence, and determination that is necessary to be a great squad. Practicing long hours, staying after school to paint spirit posters, selling ribbons, and selling programs at Varsity football games showed the girls' dedication to being successful cheerleaders.

There were only two members on the squad who had never cheered before. With the help and encouragement of sponsor, Mrs. Sandy Tyler, and the remaining girls, the two newcomers quickly became "one of the group."

The Junior Varsity cheer-

leader's job did not end with cheering their team to victory. The squad felt it was their duty to be one another's friend. Being a successful squad came naturally to the girls because they had been together for many years. They carried their binding friendships with them throughout the year. It was not the least bit unusual to see them helping one another with personal problems or for them to celebrate a friend's birthday after practice. Having so much enthusiasm and being as close as these girls were, it is no surprise that they had such a great squad.

The Junior Varsity Cheerleaders smile with a feeling of relief and satisfaction knowing that they have successfully built a pyramid during their halftime show at a home football game.
