

Making It Work

Age Proves Not To Affect Talent

Ending with an over-all record of 6-4, the J.C.C.A. Golf team had a winning season. The team, which consisted of six members, was the youngest one ever in the school's history. With the exception of senior, Terry Jones, all of the members were freshmen or younger. They didn't let age bother them though. In the end, it definitely proved not to be a disadvantage on talent. The team took all of the talent they had and made it work.

The Golf team really surprised head coach,

Tony Orsini, with their superior performance. All of the players had experience, but Orsini didn't expect them to start off the season as well as they did. He was especially pleased with the outstanding performance of freshmen, Edward Oswald and Toby Silber, who carried the team with their low scoring ability.

The youngsters definitely had a good season. It can be credited to a lot of hard practice and the desire to be great players.

Senior, Terry Jones, demonstrates his excellent golf stroke that helped to lead the golf team to a winning season.

Team members, Edward Oswald, Craig White, Terry Jones, and Toby Silber along with coach, Tony Orsini, watch a golf ball sail through the air.
