SENIORS

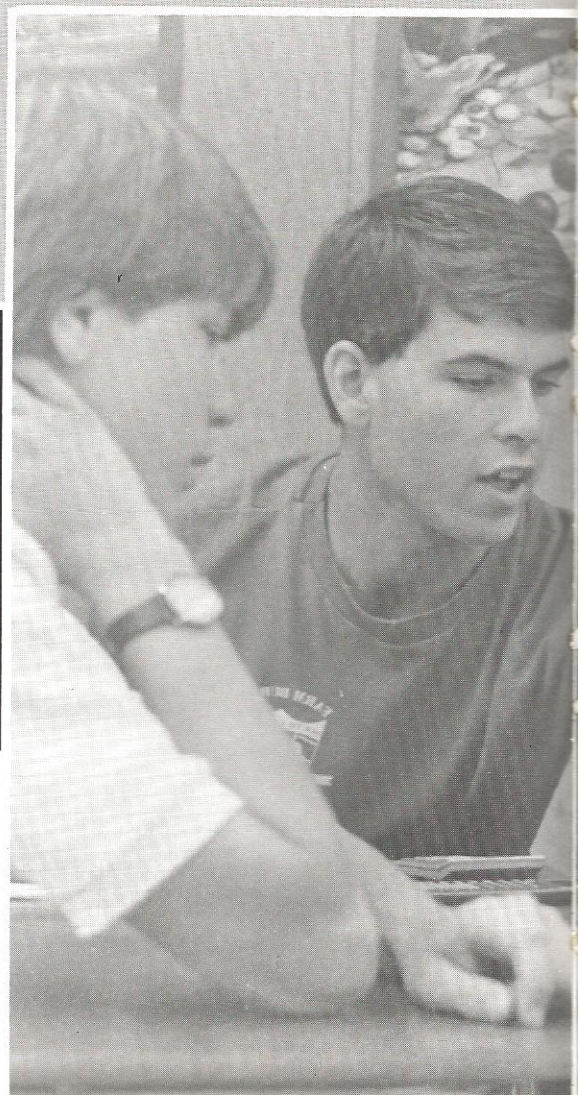

DAY BY DAY

On August 24, 1989, twenty-one seniors sat in the gymnasium listening to their new headmaster. For all of them this day was the beginning of the end. This was their last orientation and the last time that they would hear the annual "welcome back to school speech." While they listened many thoughts were churning through their minds. Some were thinking about senior privileges. Others thought about the first football game the next evening. And we all know that someone was desperately trying to come up with a way of escaping Mrs. Linder's English matters like "Which colleges will I apply to?" or "How will I improve my score on the SAT?"

One thing was certain. These seniors were very busy during their last year at John C. there never seemed to be enough hours in the day. "Free time" was no longer a part of their everyday vocabulary. Instead words like college applications, essays, deadlines, and the SAT were heard quite frequently. Most of the seniors were also involved in extracurricular activities which took up time during the day. Athletics, the Talon, the War Hawk, studying, and other school related activities occupied their after school hours.
