

We are bridging the gap, from nineteen hundred forty two through nineteen hundred ninety nine.

We are going to make a difference, that is why we have reached so far back in time. Even though our roots are scattered, may even be far apart.

When one starts up a ladder, they begin at the bottom then move to the top.

This is our aim here tonight, we do not intend to stop.

We are going to build a bridge that's firm and strong, one that will hold up under pressure as we move there on.

You see we have an enemy we must combat

We cannot stop until we have done just that.

That enemy does not respect anyone neither does it care

It has no mouth to talk neither does it have ears to hear.

I am talking about drugs, it is a killer, yes it destroys

Our little girls, our little boys.

It destroys that woman and that man

To the point, where they can no longer stand.

This is the new millennium. Yes, new that's just what it means,

Therefore we cannot stand around and dream.

These dreams have got to become reality,

It all depends on you, and it all depends on me.

We are helpless, we cannot do it along, we need Jesus Christ to help us through.

I have to include him in my everyday life, I hope you do to.

Drugs don't have any respect for the rich or poor, don't even care how you look,

All they want to do, is to get you hooked.

Drugs don't care if you are large or small

Don't care if you are short or tall.

All it want's to do, is get you where you can't do without

No matter if you put it in your vein or put it in your mouth.

I am tired of seeing our young people going down that road that has a dead end,

To the point of no return.

This bridge we are building, will be build with prayer and dedication,

This bridge we are building will make our young people want an education.

In this new millennium if we will just take a firm stand.

I believe we can have a drug free land.

~Sannie Williams