

Stamp and Bond Salesmen

Sponsor: Mr. Forti

Row One: J. Kinnard, J. Morrow, E. Venardos, J. Kalna, M. Schmidt, C. Petersen, E. Cortivo, C. Butler, G. Lampros, C. Rauscher.
 Row Two: A. Lutz, L. Jones, M. Miller, J. Mandeville, P. Bauman, D. Krauss, J. Hoffman, P. O'Shea.
 Row Three: M. McCain, E. Parent, B. Young, J. Jones, D. Fridley, R. Boland, N. Filippello, R. Brewer, K. Krell, S. Hasekamp, A. Amato, C. Imergoot.
 Row Four: C. Hohenberger, D. Meoli, B. Dierker, T. Tominia, B. Sherman, J. Olds, D. Darr, J. Baugh, M. Leontsinis.
 Row Five: R. Huether, V. Italian, R. Diefenbach, P. Ditrapani, J. Havenor, K. Stevenson, P. Burnett, C. Gross, B. Eaton, K. Ehrmann.
 Row Six: D. Foy, E. Hilgeman, V. Labantschnig, N. Lemme, D. Hirsch, M. Koverly, B. Gross, M. Duffett.

This organization of more than fifty patriotic, efficient Southwesterners performs a dual function for us all.

First, the Stamps and Bonds Club serves the nation we revere. Satellites, rockets, supersonic airplanes — these futuristic developments are thrilling, but incredibly expensive. Add to this cost the ordinary expense of government, of foreign aid, and of more mundane military establishments, and you get an astronomical federal budget. Where is the money to come from? From taxes, of course. But taxes alone are not sufficient to support the entire program. So, good citizens voluntarily invest in America's future by the purchase of savings stamps and bonds.

The second facet of these purchases is that the buyer helps himself as well as his country. Besides the fact that U. S. savings bonds are the worlds best investment, students who save this way develop habits of thrift which are as valuable as the bonds themselves. This year, our salesmen sold $5009.85 worth of America's future to wise Southwest student capitalists. Congratulations!