

GROWING

In the Lower School, every moment was rushed into the task of growing. Mental growth occupied class time, while recess encouraged physical growth. In one minute a friend could tell a secret, show a scraped knee, or explain a new game. A day might hold a new reading story, a special project, or a class play. All these things were woven together as the students grew in every direction.

