

1977 Baseball Team Gains Experience Through Daily Practices

I know how you feel about this picture. I felt the same way last year. I'll see you this summer. See you next year!

The baseball team, once again this year, started off with tough daily practices, which prepared the players for the trying season ahead. Baseball practices consisted of a lap around the field, infielding and batting practice, and the eating of many hot balls supplied by Mr. Tom Bird. Behind the pitching efforts of Dalton Prickett, Kenny Davis, Ronnie Bird, and Howie Love, and the combined efforts of all the other players, the mighty Rebels ended their season with a 6-8 record.

The Rebel fans, although they did not see a victorious game for Wade Hampton every time the team played, remained loyal to the baseball team.
